News Is Not Pleasant
Selassie's Advice
Mr. Hull, President
Our Sun Behaves Well

Conditions are not pleasant in Europe this morning. France asked England to take some of her warships out of the Mediterranean to diminish "tension" and make possible friendly peace talks with Italy.

England says emphatically NO, and wants to know whether France will back up England's ships with the French fleet if English ships are attacked by Italy's men-of-war or airplanes.

England demands that France make her position clear, with England and against Italy, or the other way 'round. It is embarrassing for France. Premier Laval never meant to go as far as war.

England, with more than 150 warships in the Mediterranean, threatens to cut off water communication between Italy and Africa, which would mean paralyzing the Italian army in Ethiopia, and a New York Times correspondent in London says England has suggested the possibility of her siding with Germany against France, which would be a surprise for "our gallant allies, the French." All this comes exactly ten years and one day after the Locarno pact was signed so solemnly.

Ethiopia's Emperor, Selassie, advises a group of 115,000 warriors wisely:

"Don't get hot-headed, because, if the enemy finds you angrily gathering in groups, they will burn you as logs in a fire.

"Don't wash your shammas; let them get dirty and make you less visible.

"After we have defeated the enemy, you can take up your shields and wear clean clothes again."

The Emperor's reference to "logs in a fire" referred, perhaps, to the Italian "flame-throwing" units already at work.

Also, the Emperor said:

"Tents must be separated by at least eight meters. (That is to prevent one air bomb killing too many.)

"If you see an airplane, leave the road or open field and hide in the jungle.

"All soldiers with good guns should then shoot the airplanes."

The last advice is excellent, but "shooting airplanes" is not easy.

England requests the U. S. A. not to ship anything to Italy to help crush that country. That would cost the United States $137,000,000 a year, but European friends naturally conclude that if we could stand a loss of ten thousand million dollars in bad debts, in one lump, a poor $137,000,000 would not bother us.

American oil men say they will continue selling oil to Italy, first, because they need the business; second, because they have investments in Italy that would be jeopardized; third, because the Royal Dutch-Shell and Anglo-Iranian companies, British-owned and controlled, are supplying fuel oil now to the Italian navy and the Italian commercial ships carrying troops and war materials through the Suez Canal.

However, with President Roosevelt and Vice-President Garner both out of the country, Secretary of State Hull, under the Constitution, is acting President and he may tell the oil people they may not sell to Italy because HE does not want to encourage brutal treatment of Ethiopia.

Be glad that your planet is not revolving around a sun known as the star, Nova Herculis. According to astronomers, that star is acting strangely. To be hitched up to it might be unpleasant. Recently Nova Herculis suddenly increased its brightness one hundred thousand times, acting like a haystack set on fire, then it became so small that only a powerful telescope could find it, now it flames out again, brilliantly visible to the naked eye.

Our own sun, billions of years old, occasionally has spots that bother radio receivers, but behaves well on the whole. So-called "new stars" are unreliable. Kepler, as poor as he was great, made some money studying one of them. The Emperor was interested because he thought that finding new star had something to do with his earthly plans. He was mistaken.

In Russia be careful what you sing. Two leaders of a band of Russian minstrels are sentenced to death in Moscow because, to the accompaniment of guitars, they sang songs hostile to Soviet government.

Russia proposes to "write the songs of a nation" for herself. If you sing in Moscow, be careful to sing "Arise, Ye Prisoners of Starvation. Arise, Ye Wretched of the Earth," even if it happen to live in a good hotel and are not hungry.

ITALIANS CUT WAY TO SAFETY

British Lion Roars

Off Gibraltar, the British dreadnaught Rodney fires the world's most tremendous broadside, as three triple turrets of 16-inch guns belch for their shells at a target in the Mediterranean. Only two ships afloat, both British, are so armed.

DUCE TROOPS BATTLE WAY TO SAFETY

By International News Service

London, Oct. 18 — An Italian column today was cut off by Ethiopian warriors north of French Somaliland, but succeeded in regaining Eritrea after bitterly sharp fighting, according to a Reuters dispatch from Dibouti, French Somaliland.

Counting upon the defection of Ras Yassou, ruler of Aussa province in Ethiopia, to enable them to reach the Awash river, where they intended to establish a base, the Italians marched out and immediately confronted a strong Ethiopian force.

They failed to reach their objective and were forced to fight their way back to Italian territory.

The Ethiopians still were holding on grimly to the region about Mount Mussa Ali, in the eastern part of the country.

The Ethiopian Danakil tribesmen of this part of the country were reported poisoning the wells in the desert to defeat the invading Italians.

Rains Block Italians On Southern Front

By Associated Press

Zeila, British Somaliland, Oct. 18—Somali runners arriving from the frontier said today rains still were holding up the Fascist advance on the southern front, from neighboring Italian Somaliland into Ethiopia.

Italian tanks were unable to move over the marshy ground beyond the wells at Aurih, Helgan and Agalah, the runners reported. The Fascist infantry was compelled to readjust its front lines for the same reason.

The rains offered an unexpected

Many Killed in New Air Bombing

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

Addis Ababe, Oct. 18—Italians today launched a new wave of bombing of Ethiopian territory, killing many women and children, according to an official Ethiopian communique.

The bombing attacks were especially violent south of the important northern town of Makale.

In this region, the official statement said:

"War planes were bombing and flying low, raking the ground with machine guns without regard for women and children, many of whom were killed."

60 Reported Killed In Makale Bombing

London, Oct. 18 (INS)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Addis Ababa tonight said Italian aviators bombed and machine-gunned Makale, killing 60 persons, according to an official communique.

The message added Ras Seyum was organizing Ethiopian troops for a mass attack on Aduwa, now held by Italians.

Italian Ship Halted By British Destroyer

Rome, Oct. 18 (INS)—Labelling the incident "unqualifiedly arbitrary English action—proof of the provocative spirit of England against Italy," the weekly Azione Coloniale today reported that a British destroyer had stopped an Italian merchant vessel.

The incident occurred outside Port Sudan harbor, said the paper's correspondent, when the warship halted the steamer Marth, which was on its way to Massua base port for Italian military operations in Eritrea from Tarantera.

PLEDGE OF NAVAL AID MADE BY LAVAL

Other War News and Pictures on Pages 2, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16

Paris, Oct. 18 (INS) — France today made a "very full" reply to the British question on French support of British warships in the Mediterranean—a reply understood to be that France would aid Britain if she were attacked by Italy in the Mediterranean while carrying out sanctions against Italy. Delivery of the reply was announced in a communique issued by the British embassy. Exact nature of the reply was not disclosed.

"Premier Laval," said the communique, "has given the British ambassador an answer on the various points which have bern under discussion by the two governments.

"This rply, which was very full, has been transmitted at once to London, but until it has been studied by the secretary of state for foreign afairs, the embassy cannot with propriety make any comment.

"But it is understood that Laval before leaving for Clrmont-Ferrand expressed his opinion that the reply was a plain affirmative to the questions put by his Majesty's government."

The non-committal and cautious British communique was interpreted in unofficial quarters here to mean the British had not yet had time to thoroughly study Laval's answer and that they do not wish to state they consider it to be affirmative until they are sure there are no "catches" in it.

Such a "catch' was in the reply given by France to a simi. question by Britain some weeks ago. The French c. ered this reply to be affirmative, but the British . sidered it DEFITELY NEGATIVE.

By Associated Press

Rome, London and Paris were spotlighted sharply today on the diplomatic front in the Italo-Ethiopian war as Premier Pierre Laval of France strove desperately to maintain the peace of the Mediterranean and achieve peace in East Africa.

Premier Laval held hasty, though momentous, discussions with the British ambassador, the Italian ambassador and Marshal Petain, former French minister of war.

MOTHER'S LEAP SAVES BABY

Tiverton, R. I., Oct. 18—Mrs. Elizabeth Campbell, 34, leaped from her bedroom window with her two-year-old son in her arms today as flames from an overturned stove licked at her clothing.

Then she stood by helplessly and watched her story and a half house burn to the ground as firemen pumped one well dry and sapped another.

Her husband, Joseph Campbell, Sr., an officer in the navy, is away on a cruise.

Mrs. Campbell told police she smelled smoke and opened the bedroom door to investigate.

Flame laden air swept in on her, forcing her to slam the door and rush to the window, clasping Joseph, Jr., in her arms, she leaped.

200 Wives Storm Relief Offices

Wives of East Boston ERA workers who have been reduced from $12 a week to $6 through cutting of working time in half stormed East Boston offices of the Welfare Department today, demanding relief.

More than 200 women, many with children at their skirts, swelled the list of new relief applicants in the last few days to more than 900.

TWO NEW PEACE MOVES REPORTED

Rome, Oct. 18 (INS) — While Italy pushed ahead with her East African campaign, reports of new peace efforts spread here.

These were based primarily on the fact that Premier Mussolini received Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador, in the forenoon at about the same time Premier Pierre Laval in Paris was conferring with Vittorio Cerrutti, Italian envoy to France.

BRITAIN, ITALY FIGHT TO WIN BACKING OF FRANCE

alone. That statement came from authoritative London sources today.

A British spokesman said today that his country had always insisted that if risks must be run for peace, they must be taken by all collectively.

Britain, he explained, has never suggested military sanctions against Italy, has never proposed a blockade and has not suggested closing the Suez Canal to Italian ships.

Guns in Ethiopia barked only fitfully as opposing forces still maneuvered on the northern front and listened to the drip of rain in the south; but the brows of foreign offices were creased deeply by the growing breach between the British and the Italians.

From Rome came word that a [illegible] of northern Africa was [illegible] into the war-like picture [illegible] of barbed wire entanglements stretched along the [illegible] Italy's colony, Libya. [illegible] warships rode at anchor [illegible]andria, Egypt, and nearby [illegible] of British airplanes [illegible] a hoarse-throated voice of [illegible]

[illegible] issue drawn by Britain [illegible] Premier Mussolini must [illegible] war in Ethiopia.

For the moment at least, Britain's instrumentality of compulsion was the penalties of the League of Nations, but Geneva fretted over a crisis in plans to impose such sanctions on Italy as to force that nation to cease hostilities. Observers believed the next 24 hours might tell whether the sanctions campaign would proceed directly against Italy or would fail.

France, seeking the key to peace, and hoping desperately she would not be forced to abandon the friendship of either Italy or Great Britain, though Laval was reported to have asked Mussolini for the last time what his most reasonable terms for peace in East Africa would be.

GERMANY REAL PUZZLE

Behind all French diplomacies there is always the eye to windward on Germany, for it is Germany which represents geographically and historically France's perpetual worry. England's friendship is of major military importance.

There was sharp denial in Paris that Mussolini had held out an offer of an Italo-French military alliance to Laval if he would turn away from British support.

Russia announced she had begun enforcing sanctions against Italy, halting arms shipments and credits.

Sweden, another league member, decided to put into effect its first sanction against Italy—putting an embargo on arms shipments to that country and at the same time lifting the embargo on arms to Ethiopia.

The shadow boxing in the diplomatic rings assumed an importance greater even than the African war which has caused it.

The British press hinted that Britain might denounce the Locarno Treaty in the event of an unfavorable answer from France on the Italy-or-League demand. An unconfirmed report in Paris said Laval inclined further toward supporting Britain after General Maxime Weygan told him a split with Britain would lead to a German attack on the continent within two years.

ONE BRITISH TRIUMPH

Encouraging word reached Geneva from Moscow that Russia had put sanctions into effect against Italy.

This in effect was an initial triumph for Britain, which, through Anthony Eden, has pressed in a vexed mood for the rapid imposition of sanctions in the face of one stumbling block after another.

Obstacles facing two of the chief economic sanctions proposed—a ban on exports of key products to Italy and a boycott of all goods coming from Italy—were discussed by committees and sub-committees of the League general staff.

But uncertainty over the ultimate attitude of France made some smaller nations doubly anxious over the repercussions of a boycott to their own national economies if they should throw themselves into a sanctions campaign which failed to meet quick success.

SELASSIE SPEEDS ARMY

Addis Ababa reports said Emperor Haile Selassie abandoned his passive stand today and hastened his warriors to the front to meet the Fascist foe. The Emperor's general staff met in councils which were expected to formulate important military moves.

Meager reports to the Ethiopian capital said the Italian northern army concentrated more on desultory bombing raids rather than on coming to grips with Ras Seyoum, Ethiopian commander in the north. From the southern front came only reports that rain in Ogaden province was holding up the Fascist advance out of Italian Somaliland.

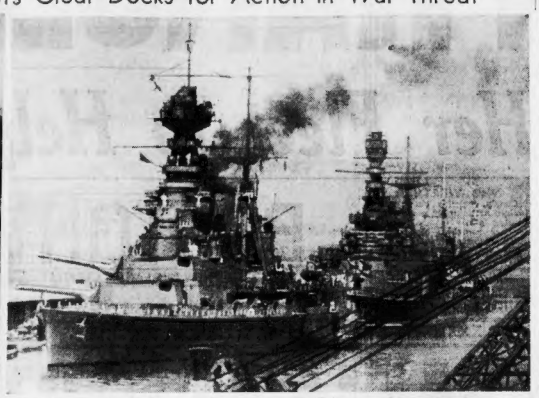
The stories from Rome on the North Africa situation said thousands of troops had been sent to Libya, for "security against native elements along the Egyptian border," and Rome newspapers attacked Britain for refusing to withdraw the British fleet from Mediterranean waters in response to the Laval request.

A dispatch from Zeila, British Somaliland, confirmed how Addis Ababa reports that rain had made soldiers on the southern front idle.

French and British Fleets Clear Decks for Action in War Threat

Pictures from Hearst Metrotone News

From Toulon, France, three French cruisers sailed secretly to an unannounced destination. This striking picture of French warships in action was taken when the above three vessels sailed for Djibouti, French Somaliland, where they will be until war is declared with Italy or the present tension eases up.



Dreadnaughts Hood, Renown, Neptune and the Orion assembled with lesser units of the British fleet as they appeared from the famous fortress rock of Gibraltar, England's sentinel at the Atlantic entrance of the Mediterranean. If the present crisis leads to war, these ocean embattlements are sure to clash with the Italian submarine armada in a battle which will determine if the end of the man o' war era is at hand.

France, After 3-Way Parley Postpones Reply to Britain

(Copyright, 1935, the Associated Press)

Paris, Oct. 18—Authoritative sources disclosed today that, before France moves in any direction in the present international crisis she must know:

1. How far Great Britain will go in naval sanctions against Italy.

2. Just what Premier Mussolini of Italy demands as a minimum in return for calling off his war against Ethiopia.

Until Premier Laval and his cabinet are definitely informed on these two points, these authorities declared, France will not reply to the British demand for a definite "yes" or "no" answer on the critical question of whether the French navy will reinforce the British warships in the Mediterranean if Italy attacks those ships.

This attitude was represented as determined upon by Premier Laval today in conference with Sir George Russell Clerk, the British ambassador, and Vittorio Cerruti, the Italian ambassador.

When the premier had finished talking to the two envoys, he called in Marshal Philippe Petain, former minister of war, in what observers interpreted as a grim gesture of preparedness on the part of France.

An authoritative source declared that the Premier consulted the marshal on "the military possibilities for France" in the unsettled European situation.

PETAIN MILITARY EXPERT

It was stated that he called in the marshal because a conference with the French general staff would have been "to official" and, besides, he considers Petain the outstanding military expert of the nation.

Ambassador Clerk was told in his hour's talk during the morning that France considers guarantees of mutual support among members of the eLague of Nations under Article XVI of the covenant sufficient protection for Great Britain in any case arising out of the enforcement of League of Nations sanctions against Italy or any other nation.

"Why does Great Britain want a specific guarantee?" Laval was reported an asking of the British. "Has she any action in mind which is not covered by the guarantees of Article XVI?"

Prince Paul of Yugoslavia, who also talked to Laval, was reported to be considering going to London to aid Laval's conciliation effort, since he was educated there and has close contacts there. He can speak for the Little Entente of Yugoslavia, Zechoslovakia and Rumania.

LOBBY EXPENSES Of Fox Film Aired

New York, Oct. 18 (AP)—A charge that the Fox Film spends "gigantic sums" in Washington for lobbying was made today by Representative Matthew A. Dunn, blind congressman from Pennsylvania, as a congressional committee hearing into the pooling of patents.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, denied the allegation.

check to General Rudolfo Graziani, Italian commander in the south.

He had been expected to make a swift dash over the usually waterless country and to gain a strong foothold in the highlands without serious opposition from the scattered Ethiopian forces.

Runners said the sudden renewal of wet weather, long after the usual end of the tropical rainy season, was accepted by the Ethiopians as a sign of divine intervention.

Taking advantage of the delay, the Ethiopian commanders and their staffs were reported working under high tension day and night to complete their plans to oppose the invasion on a battleground of their own choosing, and to shift their mobile masses of warriors without molestation.

Fearing a threat to their left flank, runners said, the Italians had been hurrying up reinforcements since Monday from the Mogadiscio sector into the southern Ogaden province.

NEW ARMS FOR TRIBESMEN

The army of Ras Desta Demtu, son-in-law of Emperor Haile Selassie, was reported continuing its movement down the Webbe Shibeli river valley from the interior of Ethiopia.

Cheered by Somali tribesmen, trucks carrying new rifles and cartridges for the Ethiopian army are passing daily through British Somaliland en route to Jigiga and Harar.

More than 100 tons of munitions have been delivered safely across the frontier since the Italians began their invasion two weeks ago.

Had dry weather enabled the Italian tanks to cover the desert, this route from the coast would have been cut off.

The British camel corps is patrolling the boundary beyond the present advance line of the Italian troops to prevent any incursions on the tribesmen of British Somaliland.

Decisive Battle Seen Imminent at Makale

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Asmara, Eritrea, Oct. 15 (Delayed in Transmission) — The first real opposition to the Italian advance through Ethiopia was believed to be developing today around Makale, major objective 60 miles south of Aduwa.

Three important Ethiopian leaders were reported concentrating their forces in that district, where it has long been predicted that there was a good chance for a big battle.

Ras Seyoum, Ethiopian commander and former Governor of Aduwa, who fled when the Italians made their conquering advance and took his capital, was said to be uniting his troops with those of Hierendi of Lalibela.

A third Ethiopian chieftain, Asfau Casga, was moving with another large force toward Makale.

Selassie Speeds New Troops to Front

Addis Ababa, Oct. 18—Emperor Haile Selassie abandoned his passive stand today and hastened his warriors to the front to meet the invading Fascist forces.

Ethiopian soldiers and officers alike were ordered to go to active defense of the empire against the Italians. The Emperor's general staff met in councils which were expected to formulate important military moves.

The Minster of War, Ras Mulugheta, arranged to leave by airplane tomorrow for Dessye, troop concentration point in the heart of the empire.

"If until now I did not order the man power of the nation to the front, it was because I hoped the League of Nations would save the empire from attack," the Emperor said after a review of thousands of his warriors.

"But now, contrary to an international agreement, our frontiers are violated and our sacred land invaded."

Egyptian Prince Visitor

London, Oct. 18 (AP)—Crown Prince Farouk of Egypt arrived in London today to study at the Royal Military Academy. The Prince, greeted by the Egyptian minister and a representative of the foreign office, was accompanied by a staff of 17, including doctors and two tutors.

Stump for Lodge? His Wife Won't!

'Make a Speech? Never!'

Family and Home, Not Politics, Her Forte

By PEGGY DOYLE

There'll never be more than one career in the Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., household at North Shore's Beverly Cove.

With smiling insistence, the attractive, blonde wife of Beverly's 33-year-old legislator, who last night announced his candidacy to follow in his distinguished grandfather's footsteps in the United States Senate, today made that clear as crystal.

"Campaign for my husband?" she repeated, with a lilting laugh. "I pity anybody who would have to listen to any speech of mine! "I have no capabilities in that direction. I think one must be born to politics and I do not come of a politically-minded family."

Young Mrs. Lodge is the former Emily Sears, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Henry P. Sears of Boston and Beverly Cove and one of Boston's most popular debutantes the year she was introduced to society.

She and her tall, handsome husband, who, despite his youth, is regarded as probably the best informed student of the history, theory and practice of government in the Massachusetts Legislature, and their two small sons make their all-year-round residence on the Sears estate in a house neighboring her parents' dwelling.

"One career in the family," she said, "is all-sufficient. George Cabot Lodge, 4, and Henry Sears Lodge, 5 (who answers to 'Harry'), my home and my two pet charities—the North Shore Hospital in Salem and the Red Cross Motor Corps here in Beverly."

Amused at the "impossible prospect of my taking the stump," Mrs. Lodge, who enjoys nothing better than hearing her husband make a political speech, asserts that she herself would be "perfectly horrible" attempting the same thing.

"There are women," she grants, "who can do that sort of thing and do it very creditably. I admire them although I don't envy them. The very thought of making a speech is disconcerting. If one can't do it well, I don't think it should be attempted."

Serenity at Home

Reluctantly, because she is distinctly averse to stepping out of her preferred role of wife and mother, Mrs. Lodge admitted that her husband has made considerable political progress.

"Yes," she agreed, with some hesitation, "he has done quite well—thus far," and here she remembered to "knock wood."

"And without any assistance—interference by me—from me.

"It has always seemed to me that the best way I can help him is to provide the most serene, attractive, comfortable atmosphere possible at home and to care for our two children. That's my job."

With announcement of Mr. Lodge's candidacy for the Senate seat of Marcus Coolidge, political experts forecast one of the heaviest battles in Massachusetts history.

James F. Cavanagh, Boston attorney, is known to also seek the toga on the Republican side, and Democratic candidates are hinted in the person of Governor James M. Curley or State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley.

Cavanagh is the only candidate who has made formal announcement, with the exception of Mr. Lodge.

Senator Coolidge, who is away on vacation, could not be reached for comment.

SHERMAN GETS NEWS

Isn't Worried Over Esther's Plight

Worcester, Oct. 18—The ban preventing Nawell P. Sherman, convicted slayer of his wife, from reading the newspapers was lifted today.

The first thing he saw when officials in Worcester County jail took him the paper was the report of the illness of Esther Magill, for whose love, the state declared, he committed the "American Tragedy" murder.

"Oh, she'll be all right," Sherman remarked, according to guards.

The prisoner's counsel continues plans for an appeal to the Supreme Court, and a petition for a new trial based on exceptions.

Attorney William W. Buckley, who conducted the defense, said press of business would prevent him from filing the petitions today or tomorrow.

Monday is the last day on which such petitions may be received.

Miss Magill was reported "doing all right" in Memorial Hospital, where she was recuperating from an appendicitis operation.

Strato Hop Tomorrow

Washington, Oct. 18 (AP)—A possibility that a new attempt to soar into the stratosphere would be made tomorrow was reported today by National Geographic Society officials.

KICKED In the Middle OF NIGHT

HUBBY WASN'T CHUMMY

Her husband pointed a gun at her and threatened to shoot if she went shopping any more, Mrs. Marguerite Diaz of Lincoln street, Lowell, testified today in Suffolk Probate Court.

Judge Frederick B. Dillon granted her a divorce from Joseph R. Dias, who did not contest the action.

They were married 11 years ago, she said. A year later her husband hauled her out of bed in the middle of the night and kicked her, Mrs. Diaz testified, and she never could find out the reason.

Mrs. Laura B. Hall, of Massachusetts avenue, Back Bay, had a harrowin tale to tell, too, with the result that she also was granted an uncontested divorce.

Her five years of married life was interspersed with beatings and brutal treatment, she told the court, beginning when her husband suddenly developed a distaste for her cooking.

He got up one morning from the breakfast table, she said, and struck her. Her brother saved her worse treatment that time, she said.

Another time she went to sleep in her mother's house when she was warned that her husband, Arthur S. Hall, was drunk and looking for her.

Next morning a friend called to say he had come home and smashed everything in the house, she said.

A few hours later, Hall appeared, the wife testified, and entered his mother-in-law's home by the direct method of smashing down the door.

He came into her bedroom and said he was going to kill her, she told Judge Dillon, but her father saved her by knocking the intruder out with a punch on the jaw.

Finally Hall came into the drug store where she was working, she said, and said he was going home to kill their baby.

He never got there, because police arrested him on the street for drunkenness, she testified. It was then that she decided to get a divorce.

Rival Acts as Manicure For Cinderella Girl

WEALTH LOST SO HEIRESS GETS JOB

By BETTY DI PESA

(Copyright, 1935, by the Boston Evening American)

Once Editha Pierce Davis was an heiress to part of the American Radiator millions.

Once Eleanor Pierce Watts was an heiress to part of the American Radiator millions.

And now, the Boston Evening American discovered today, Eleanor Pierce Watts, pretty and 22, is a Tremont street manicurist at $15 a week, who does the finger nails of the wealthy Editha four times a month.

Where Fortune has always smiled on Editha, the Cinderella Girl whose adoption from poor family led to her inheritance, it has been frowning since 1931 on the manicurist, a year the junior of Editha.

Hereditary heiress in the family where Editha was but an adopted daughter of a third wife, Eleanor is the sole support of her mother, and they live in one room in the Back Bay.

EXCLUSIVE SCHOOLING

When Eleanor was attending the fashionable Chamberlain School for Girls in the Back Bay, she lived at Boston's swankiest and most expensive hotel, with never a thought that some day she would be a $15-a-week manicurist.

But Fortune's creaky wheel has turned during the intervening four years. Editha is wealthy in her own right and has just broken her engagement to a policeman's son, while Eleanor has only hope that some day she may receive some of the many thousands that were to have been hers on her grandmother's death.

Eleanor's grandmother was Mrs. Ellie Pierce Watts of New York. She was a sister of John Pierce, a vice-president of the American Radiator Corporation, and held at one time 300 shares of common and 200 shares of preferred stock in the corporation.

At one time, Mrs. Watts was worth approximately $640,000 through all her holdings, but the break in the stock market reduced her fortune considerably.

John Pierce, while married to his second wife, met Adelaide Leonard, a housemaid, and sent her to school, giving her an excellent education. When his second wife died, Pierce married the housemaid. When he died, leaving her his fortune, she married Howard C. Davis, whom she later divorced.

Thus Editha, when she was adopted as Edith May Scanlon of Jamaica Plain, became Editha Pierce Davis and heiress to a fortune which she has now inherited and which is estimated at $500,000.

ESTATE VANISHES

Meanwhile, however, a New York woman, former schoolmate of Eleanor Pierce Watts' grandmother, and succeeded in getting into the grandmother's confidence during her last years.

After the grandmother died, the relatives were stunned to learn that the estate had vanished.

Action was taken and the woman and her husband found, but the exhausted she had pulled herself tracing took many months. The together, however, given up her stocks had been sold. Eleanor's dreams, learned manicuring and hopes were blasted. She had $400 had secured a job in the bank and a society girl's education. Before the $4000 was the other's nails.

Meanwhile, one heiress manicures

WOMAN'S $1,000,000 FIRM

WUPPERMANNS' WHOLE WORKS

New York, Oct. 18—On the eve of her 84th birthday, Mrs. Josephine Wuppermann, mother of Frank and Ralph Morgan, the actors, signed the papers that made her firm a $1,000,000 corporation.

She also discovered that her office has no looking-glass.

She was back at her desk today, after celebrating the anniversary, and laughed about the lack of a mirror.

"I must have left frivolity outside the door when I came in. Maybe that's why the firm won't let me retire," she said.

Back in 1915, Mrs. Wuppermann became the first woman president of a large firm (W. Wuppermann & Co., makers of Angostura bitters), and in two decades increased its capital stock from $85,000 to $1,000,000.

Until this year, she was at the office daily. Now she keeps in communication with it from her home in Greenwich, Conn., and presides at directors' and stockholders' meetings.

Mrs. Wuppermann

Her children—she reared eight of her eleven to adulthood—call the firm's success "a one-woman proposition." Mrs. Wuppermann said the children helped.

Her son, Frank, who took the stage name of Morgan, is the firm's vice-president in charge on the west coast. Another son, A. Edward Wuppermann, is a director and general manager, and one of her daughters is also on the board. Her late husband was the only other head the firm has had.

"I'm one of the kind that doesn't sign anything unless I know what I'm signing," she said. "I'm not a rubber stamp."

Her business philosophy also includes "not shirking, not putting things off, and gradual expansion, with no display.

"That, I believe, is good business," she said.

She has stuck to it since she was 15 and kept books for her father, who operated a line of merchant ships.

Edward, who has been with the firm since 1888, said he was "Mother's high-class errand boy."

"You bet I'm tickled. Wouldn't you be?"

It's a safe bet he's just picked a suit—and saved money—at Bond's Fall Festival

Day before yesterday I barged into Bond's—with a chip on my shoulder. I'd been reading about their Fall Festival, I needed a new suit, and I wasn't against saving some hard-earned dollars. Those double-woven worsteds they're featuring this week at $25, with two trousers, sounded good to me. I've seen 'em in show windows, tagged around $30; and I know they wear like iron. But I'd never bought at Bond's, so I was all set for that old story, "sorry, you're a bit late—your size is gone". Well sir, they didn't show me one! They trotted out a cool two dozen of those suits in my size all of them marked $25, including two trousers. From then on it was a pleasure! You bet I'm tickled, wouldn't you be?

P.S. Too bad the chap up above was in day before yesterday. He just missed a last minute shipment from our new Rochester plant. It includes a corking lot of luxurious Stonehaven Worsted Suits at $30, with 2 trousers. And a hand-tailored group of Rochester De Luxe fashions that are pippins! Suits like these usually are tagged $42.50—Bond's price is $35, with 2 trousers. They're headliners in our Fall Festival, this week.

U. S. INDICTS FOURTH MAN IN ERA FRAUDS

Out of investigations into alleged ERA and PWA payroll frauds a fourth man, Edward J. O'Connor of Hoyt avenue, Lowell, a PWA project engineer, was revealed today as under indictment by the federal grand jury.

Earlier, the names of two Dorchester men and one from Roslindale had been revealed following indictments growing out of an alleged payroll fraud on a Boston City Hospital ERA project.

O'Connor, Assistant United States Attorney Arthur J. B. Cartier revealed, was engaged on the Belvedere Park sewer project in Lowell when he was alleged to have retained a project worker on the payroll for several weeks after the worker quit the job.

FACE HEARING MONDAY

Although it is understood that investigation into ERA and PWA frauds has not been completed in Boston and Lowell, O'Connor and the other three will be arraigned in federal court next Monday on the indictment charges.

Charles M. McGrail, of Center street, Dorchester, foreman and acting timekeeper on a City Hospital ERA project, is named in one indictment, charged in nine counts with causing a false payroll to be used.

TWO MASONS NAMED

The other indictments name Charles Mains, of Bispham street, Dorchester, timekeeper on the project, and William E. Bailey, of Granfield avenue, Roslindale, brick mason, on charges of aiding and abetting McGrail.

Cartier indicated that Bailey worked as a brick mason on the City Hospital project but later secured a better job on a Waltham PWA project.

Cartier said that Bailey's name was retained on the ERA payroll, however, and that the government was defrauded of $81.

JUDGE M'LEOD TAKEN BY DEATH

Judge Frederic J. Macleod, one of the most widely known jurists on the Massachusetts superior court bench, died early today at Palmer Memorial Hospital.

He succumbed from an abdominal disorder, never rallying from an operation performed last Monday. He was 65 years old.

His last big case was the ouster proceedings against former Mayor Charles A. Ross of Quincy. Two other justices, Frederick W. Fosdick and Patrick M. Keating, sat on the case with him.

Judge Macleod was born in Prince Edward Island, June 20, 1870, the son of Hector and Melinda (Douglas) Macleod.

A graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Graduate School in 1894, Judge Macleod was an honor student in all grades, and a football player.

He was graduated from Harvard Law School in 1896, and was admitted to the bar the same year.

In 1906 he was elected to the state senate and served two terms. He was appointed to the bench in 1922.

Surviving are two children, a daughter, Janet, and a son, Graham, and his widow, the former Elizabeth Gwendolen Connor, whom he married in 1910.

First Housing Land Sold in Cambridge

First transfer of title in the Federal government of land in Cambridge's $3,00,000 housing project was made today.

U. S. Attorney James J. Sullivan and Sidney V. Smith, disbursing agent for the Department of Justice, turned over to Ralph D. Weston, attorney for Kathryn E. and Robert L. Littlehale, a check for $15,000, taking totle to property in School street, Cambridge.

Government officials announced that buildings on the property bounded by Washington, Main, Portland and Harrison streets would be razed at once, and bids for foundations for the housing project sought. Work may begin in November and December.

Sullivan said the Littlehale check was the first of approximately $800,000 to be made within ten days.

City Councillor Francis J. Roche, sponsor of the housing propect, declared the city will immediately benefit by nearly $100,000, as part of the contract calls for full payment of 1935 taxes.

Greely "Much Weaker"

Washington, Oct. 18 (AP)—Major-General Adolphus W. Greely, 91, Arctic explorer, was reported "very much weaker" today at Walter Reed Hospital.

FACTS

Washington, Oct. 17 (US)—AAA officials in Washington predicted that benefits to farmers for hog slaughter, plow-under and idle lands would be paid by the processing taxes collected from the handlers of foodstuffs, cotton and other basic commodities.

The processing tax collections for the first three months of this fiscal year are $115,000,000 less than a year ago.

At this rate the deficit of collections at the end of the year will oe $480,000,000.

Bailiffs Lose In Corn Cure Suit Won by Mr. Wong and U. S. A.

He Must Stick to Bunions

PHILIP WONG
Wonder Foot Man

RACY HEARING FAILS TO BAR "MEDICINE" ADS IN MAILS

By JAMES J. SMITH

Now any impartial observer would say that Philip Wong and his $11 corn cure won a partial victory today in Federal court—and at the same time any impartial observer would say that the United States also won a partial victory over Wong.

The only losers in the case of this U. S. A., versus, Wong were veteran court bailiffs with cornknobbed, aching feet, who had awaited anxiously, but vainly Wong's intended proof, by living demonstration in court, that his corn cure "is that McCoy."

Judge Charles F. Digge, who presided at the hearing called by the Federal Trade Commission to look into Wong's lavish advertising of his mystery product, allowed that maybe a demonstration wasn't necessary.

Stick to Corns

Wong, a Cambridge Chinese laundryman, was a bit disappointed at this, but he was cheered when it was indicated that he would be allowed to continue advertising his product as a medicine helpful in the treatment of corns and callouses.

He may not, however, it was hinted by Allen C. Phelps, counsel for the commission, advertise the black, oily substance, as a cure for cancer, goiter, rheumatism, consumption, appendicitis, general restlessness or any other of the ills and ailments to which mankind is susceptible.

Wong, a man alone during the brief hearing, gravely shook hands with the federal representatives at this and shuffled out of the federal building, to head back for his laundry in Prospect street, Cambridge, where he was due to make up a batch of special Chinese shampoo, which he also sells, and to package some China tea—another of his many sales sidelines to collar and cuff bathing.

Wong's brow was considerably wrinkled during the outline of the case by Attorney Phelps, and every long legal term brought a new line across the laundryman's forehead.

"You advertised this as a cure for corns, goiters, cancer and other ailments in newspapers and magazines in this country?" Phelps finally asked Wong.

"Yah, yah! Two, three times." Wong agreed, nodding his head.

Q—The magazine—where was that published?"

A—Min.

Q—Min?

A—Yah., Min.

It was finally brought out that Wong meant Wenonah, Minnesota.

Wong then said that he had advertised in another magazine, the "Home Boupon."

This was a bit baffling for a magazine name, but they settled on the magazine name "Home Circle."

Q—Did you advertise in Washington?

A—Oh, yah. Don't put that down though.

Q—What's the matter—don't put that down?

A—That was adverise for lice.

Q—Cooking what? (Phelps wore a startled air.)

A—Cook lice. Eat nice cook lice.

"He means rice," interposed Judge Digge. Phelps breathed more freely.

Q—Did you charge for telling them how to cook rice?

A—Oh, yah, charge a dollah, a dollah.

Q—How did you do that?

A—No good! Nobody buy.

Phelps introduced as an exhibit, an advertisement declared to have been sent through the mails by Wong. Then Phelps picked up the exhibit, jar of medicine. He read the label.

Q—Now about this stipulation?

A—What is that word stipulation?

Q—Well, I'm going to explain it to you.

A—Yah, yau explain. Big language, I don't know that.

After a number of other questions, during which Wong revealed that he had made no sales of his product and had cut the price from $11 to $5, Phelps said the exhibit's and testimony would be taken to Washington, including the advertisement sent through the mails. This reads in part:

"I call soft corn too strong cancer. cancer is not bad as soft corn. this valuable will eat up corns little by little, guarantee of 20 years up soft corn, callouses and all kind bad diseases will be cure aa this valuable medicine is best make of the whole world. only cost a little money. this valuable medicine was made very strong for terrible soft corn use. some little corns grow very deep. take a little time you will scrape them all off.

"1. for deep soft corn hard corn, and callouses use. do not add water. put on three times a day. put soft corn valuable up and down all over between your toe both side toe and put some on the bottom part near the toe after half inch deep corn. put more on the bad corn.

"scrape your corns very clean with a dull knife scrape the head of soft corns deep as you can two times a week.

'Dixie Fay' Robbed Of $3 in Home

"Dixie Fay," who sings at a down town tavern, was held up at the point of a gun in his apartment on Westland avenue, Back Bay, today and robbed of $3.25.

When Dixie" isn't singing, his real name is Lawrence W. St. Cyr.

He isn't used to that sort of treatment, and he was very excited about it when he told his story to police at Station 16. He said:

"I waked quite suddenly and saw a very uncouth sort of fellow standing over my bed. He was quite tall.

"He was wearing a soft grey hat and a brown suede jacket.

"Over his mouth and chin was a white handkerchief, picked out in a dainty blue figure.

"This person forced me to get out of bed and then lie face down on the floor.

"I protested, of course. But he merely said, 'Shut up!'"

GUARD NAMED IN DOPE TRIAL

Francis J. DeMore, Deer Island prisoner told Judge George C. Sweeney and a jury in federal court today he received two packages from Morris Rosenthal, former guard at the Long Island Hospital on December 12, 1934, to deliver to a prisoner.

DeMore, government witness, testified at the trial of Rosenthal, Francis N. Hurley, and Frederick S. McArthur on charges of violation the Harrison narcotic act.

Asst. U. S. Atty. William T. McCarthy said he would show Rosenthal a patient at the hospital and gave DeMore a package of cigarettes and a rubber finger containing 96 grains of heroin to be delivered to Hurley, prisoner at Deer Island, with a paper on which were the names of other prisoners named "Snyder" and "Dave the Greek."

HUEY'S DEATH Probe Widened

New Orleans, Oct. 18 (AP)—An order issued in criminal court today will permit examination of messages sent by telegraph companies to determine "whether or not a conspiracy to murder Senator Huey Long actually existed."

Judge William J. O'Hara gave the power to the superintendent of the state bureau of criminal identification, head of the late Huey Long's state police force, to make the investigation.

6 ATTACK ROY'S DEATH ALIBI

Skowhegan, Me., Oct. 18—Six witnesses, whose stories authorities claim shatter the alibi of David Roy in the slaying of Annie Knights, 12, in Fairfield, are to confront the 44-year-old carpenter today.

In addition to Roy's wife, Mrs. Yvonne Roy, and his 12-year-old daughter, Mabel, authorities say they have four other witnesses.

Despite 14 hours of grilling Roy has steadily maintained his innocence of the fiendish killing.

Latest witnesses to refute Roy's alibi that he was in his home at 8 p. m. on the murder night are two Fairfield women.

Mrs. Thomas Barker and Mrs. Ormond Foster told investigators they saw Roy at 6:05 p. m. that night near the spot the girl's body was found.

According to present plans, the witnesses will be summoned and Roy given an opportunity to see them file in before the investigators.

He is then to be taken into the room with them when they will repeat their statements in his presence.

Later in the day, officials plan to reconstruct the crime which was discovered October 9 when the girl's body, strangled and attacked, was found in a clump of alders.

OUR MARY'S CROWN

19 Year Old Parisian to Get It

By International News Service

New York, Oct. 18—Mary Pickford, for years acclaimed as America's sweetheart, prepared today to vacate that mythical throne in favor of her own protege—a blue-eyed, yellow-tressed importation from Paris—Araine Gorg.

Barely able to speak English, the young Parisienne—she's only 19—was brought here as the first member of a new group called Pickford Players, in which its namesake plays the leading role, with Jesse Lasky, film mogul, as the leading man.

"Don't ask me how good she'll be," Miss Pickford said. "I don't want to publicize the child. She's very pretty and quaint, and she has personality, confidence, and ambition."

As for the Pickford Players, Mary said it is her dream come true, consisting of a group of talented players, comparatively unknown.

"It will function like a motion picture stock company," she explained. "There won't be any stars, and there won't be any individual publicity.

"We'll keep out petty jealousies and swelled heads—we'll train them hard for a year before they even see a camera."

POSSE SEIZES GUN WIELDER

Canaan, Me., Oct. 18—Maurice Adams, 56, sought for the alleged shooting of his son, was captured today with a loaded shot gun at his bedside.

A posse surrounded Adams' farm house early today and overpowered the man accused of wounding Elmer Adams, his 30-year-old son.

Adams was taken to Kennebec County jail in Augusta. He had eluded posses yesterday.

Young Adams, shot while ploughing on a Clinton farm, was reported in good condition at Waterville hospital.

The shooting was the climax of a nine-year-old feud over the will of Mrs. Adams which, officials said, left all her property to Elmer and a sister. The father lost a court fight to break the will but continued to reside in the home

City Treasurer Willam J. Shea was the first defeated mayoralty candidate to announce intention of filing. He was only 425 votes behind John W. Lyons, one of the nominees.

Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., 24-year-old Boston College senior, who missed nomination to one of the eight councillor-at-large vacancies by only 428 votes, will ask for another check.

Two defeated candidates for ward council also asked recounts.

East Boston Ferry of 1833

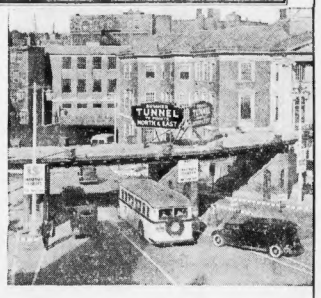
Sumner Tunnel of 1935



WHEN you glide down the ramp of the new Sumner Tunnel and make a subterraqueous crossing of Boston Harbor in three minutes, you will be passing beneath one of Boston's earliest lanes of travel. In 1631 the first ferry in the country plied between Charlestown and Boston. On May Day, 1833, the first regular ferry service to East Boston was begun. The craft with capacity for twenty-five passengers was propelled by hand-operated wheels. The first steam ferry boat, the "Tom Thumb," was placed in East Boston service during the fall of the same year.

Boston's new traffic tunnel is a notable engineering feat. The work was completed without the loss of a single life in a little over three year's time. Twenty-eight thousand cars have passed through this $19,000,000 tube within a single day. During rush hours the entire air supply is changed every minute and a half.

★ ★ ★

This bank in its century and a half of service has witnessed great changes in Boston. Its ability to keep pace with the changing needs of its customers is the best proof of its fitness to serve you today.

TRAIN TO WED, ADVICE OF JURIST

Below is the fifth of a series of comments by well-known Boston residents on marriage and the value of Boston's proposed "marriage clinic."

Inspiration for the new organization is the problem of the children in unhappy homes.

The Marriage Study Association, Inc., which will establish the clinic, is headed by Professor Joseph H. Beale of Harvard law school.

BY PEGGY DOYLE

Many a good husband or a good wife is ruined in childhood.

The problems of marriage are still largely the problems of women.

As well expect a day laborer to understand Sanskrit as to expect the unmarried in love to accept advice on how to avoid unhappy marriage.

* * *

Without any attempt to appear sage but with every intent to crystallize her very definite and genuinely illuminating ideas on marriage and Boston's proposed "marriage clinic," Judge Jennie Loitman Barron today capsuled her sentiments for Boston Evening American readers.

Special justice of Western Norfolk's district court, Judge Barron is a former assistant attorney general of Massachusetts. As a one-time member of the Boston school committee, she efficiently and understandingly shouldered the problems of 131,000 school children.

"Thrillingly absorbing jobs," she says of these highly important appointments, "but being the mother of three lovely daughters is the best part of life—the best job of all."

Older and inevitably wiser than Miss Leslie Blake, whose original comments opened this series, she can discover no finer tribute to marriage than that made by this charming society girl—"It is the best career any woman can ask."

"From birth my daughters have been trained for marriage, and whether they marry or not, they will be better woman for it. It is shocking to realize that many men and women can never hope to be successful husbands and wives because of their childhood training and environment.

BUREAU WILL AID

"The problems of marriage are still largely the problems of women. Mothers who make 'mamma's boys' of their son and who rate their husbands insignificant failures in the eyesight of their daughters are largely to blame for the marital happiness of those sons and daughters."

While a marriage clinic, in the opinion of this distinguished woman judge, cannot be expected to be a miracle worker in the matter of straightening out all between the mismates' difficulties, it should be the means, she believes, of bringing about better understanding between many mal-adjusted couples.

"If an intelligent attorney can effect a reconciliation between a prospective client and his or her mate—as many attorneys do endlessly—why should not skilled psychiatrists and trained social workers do it, and infinitely more effectively and frequently?"

WON'T TAKE ADVICE

Did she think that a competent psychiatrist, acting in his official capacity as a member of Boston's proposed "marriage clinic," might be of any assistance in prescribing happiness for the honeymoon-bound?

"With some knowledge of the factors that make for happy or unhappy marriage, a skilled psychiatrist can advise a young couple with definite certainty on many vital points. But you might as well expect a day laborer to understand Sanskrit, a Garbo to come out of her shell, a Joe Louis to spout the theory of relativity as to expect a couple in love to take advice on love and marriage."

Dennett Hits U. S. Spending

Bitterly denouncing the Roosevelt administration's spending program, Carl P. Dennett, chairman of the National Economy League, today demanded immediate retrenchment.

He told the fall meeting of the Boston City Federation of Women's Clubs, held at the Y. W. C. A. that "human rights" and "property rights" cannot be divorced. Dennett said:

"It requires little brains to spend other people's money. It does require brains and courage and determination to reduce government expenditures.

"We are reaping today the fearful results of cruel and wanton destruction of crops and livestock by paying farmers to raise in foreign countries with foreign labor foodstuffs to sell in this country to replace our 'controlled' produce."

1,310,733 Work On WPA Jobs

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 18—A gain of 184,479 work relief jobs during the past two weeks was reported today by Aubrey Williams, acting Works Progress Administrator.

With less than two weeks before the November 1 deadline for employing 3,150,000 persons, he reports that 1,310,732 now have jobs.

This included 594,427 on WPA projects, 582,643 in the Civilians Conservation Corps and 133,658 on other federal projects.

Frank A. Goodwin, registrar of motor vehicles, today suspended the license of Louise H. Daley of 39 Mary street, Arlington, for 10 days for allegedly operating her automobile to the left of the white line more than a mile on Memorial Drive.

Goodwin said an operator who stays close to the middle of the road, interfering with more swiftly moving vehicles, is the worst kind of a nuisance.

They Only Went for the Ride

Northampton, Oct. 18—Last week Chief of Police Bartholomew Brenahan heard considerable racket in the street.

He sent Policeman John McGrath to investigate.

McGrath returned and reported having given tickets to Walter and Stanley Mastalis of South Deerfield, who had been gaily—and loudly—tooting their auto horns to celebrate a marriage, in which they were carrying the bride and groom to the station for their New York honeymoon.

Today in district court each paid a $5 fine. And—

Asked whose marriage had occasioned the exceptional tooting, the brothers Mastalis paged "Believe It or Not" Ripley with:

"We don't know. We were just in it for the ride."

Falls 4 Floors to Death in Shaft

TELLS OF ABUSE IN MANY CITIES, GETS DIVORCE

"My husband has punched me, or choked me, or slapped me in practically every big city in the country."

Beautiful, blonde Dorothy Stevens DeVito of Minot street, Neponset, explained in Suffolk Probate Court today that as a vaudeville show girl she traveled extensively, her husband, Albert De Vito going with her.

"And almost everywhere we went we'd quarrel, and he'd hit me," she told Judge Frederick B. Dillon.

Miss DeVito was granted a divorce, uncontested.

But not until her brother, Perley Stevens, had had his say.

Stevens, well-known orchestra leader, testified that DeVito once showed his musicians an ardent love letter which he said he had received from a girl in London.

His testimony supported Miss DeVito's claim that her husband had frequently stayed out nights and seemed interested in "some one else."

Mrs. Carrie M. Stevens, the show girl's mother, testified to a specific instance of a beating she said De Vito gave her daughter.

"I was in the kitchen at my Minot street home in June, 1934, when I heard Dorothy scream. I rushed upstairs to the bedroom, and saw Albert abusing her terribly," she testified.

She added that he frequently used abusive language.

Attorney Willard P. Lombard, for the plaintiff, brought out other alleged instances, occurrin in Philadelphia and in Louisville, Ky., where DeVito is alleed to have beaten his client.

2 Charged With Break

Two West End youths were arrested at gunpoint today and held on charges of breaking and entering a grocery store on Cambridge street, West End, and stealing $22 in cash. The youths, John Vaccari, 18, of Chamber court, and Michael Rolanti, 20, of Leverett street, both faced the police lineup today.

Beatings Her Milestones

Beatings she allegedly suffered, from her husband in "practically every big city of the country" were described in Suffolk probate court today by this former stage beauty, Mrs. Dorothy DeVito of Minot street, Neponset. She was granted an uncontested divorce

PARENTS RALLY TO OATH LAW

Worcester, Oct. 18—A split in the harmony of the Massachusetts Parent-Teachers' Association convention loomed here today when it became known that a stand was to be taken on the Teachers' Oath law. The resolutions committee was preparing to draft and push through a resolution condemning the law.

But a powerful group, largely made up of parents, will attempt to block such a resolution as not representing the opinion of the body.

Daniel L. Marsh, president of Boston University, had told the convention that in his opinion the oath law is "silly, futile and tending toward despotism."

Whether the split will be, broadly, between the parents as proponents of the law and teachers as it opponents, was not known.

Mrs. George Hoague of Brookline urged the members of the association to inform President Roosevelt that the Parent-Teacher' Association wanted the neutrality act which expires February 1936 continued.

Red Men Ask Teeth In New Oath Law

A demand that "teeth" be given the teachers' oath bill was made at the closing session of the Great Council of Massachusetts, Improved Order of Red Men.

In passing the resolution, the Great Council argued that the Legislature pass an amendment to the bill providing adequate punishment for those who refuse to take the oath or who take it under protest.

Packet Scanned for Suspect

New Bedford, Oct. 18—Joseph Alphonso, accused mutilator of a friend, may be aboard the North Atlantic's last passenger sailing ship.

The packet Corona cleared here Monday on a 3000-mile trip to the Cape Verde Islands, 36 hours after Alfonso disappeared.

NEW LAWS ON DRESS

Immodesty Draws League Fire

Chicago, Oct. 18—Warnings against what they termed "the philosophy of new Paganism," with its consequent immodesty, were broadcast today by the newly-formed League of Modesty.

"The extremes of immodest fashions may be seen on the bathing beach, in the movies and in nudist colonies," said the Rev. Walter Cronkrin, one of the league organizers.

"In all art there must be restraint," he said, "and so, too, in the art of dressing women should remember that something should be left to the imagination. I would urge you not to follow fashion slavishly."

At the first public meeting of the league four rules were promulgated. They were:

1—The dress should be cut not lower in front or in back than one or two inches below the little hollow of the throat.

2—The sleeves should at least cover the elbows, and the skirt fall far below the knees.

3—The stockings should be worn full length and be neither flesh colored nor transparent.

ZENGE HEARS DEATH PLEA

By International News Service

Chicago, Oct. 18—Contending it was malice and not madness that inspired Mandeville Zenge to commit the emasculation murder of Dr. Walter J. Bauer, the state today demanded the electric chair for the 26-year-old Missouri farmer boy.

Closing arguments in the case were heard in Judge Cornelius Harrington's court today.

The jury was expected to retire this afternoon to deliberate the fate of the youth who, the defense maintains, slew in a moment of madness borne of the marriage of his schoolday sweetheart, Louise Shaffer, to Dr. Bauer.

MISS FERGUSON IS EXPERT IN COOKERY

A brilliant record of schooling and experience is behind Edna M. Ferguson, well known today as a lecturer on homemaking and on the finer aspects of cookery, who is to conduct the American-Advertiser Food Cooking School which opens at the Hotel Bradford next Tuesday.

Miss Ferguson is not only a graduate of Macdonald Institute of Guelph, Ont., but she has also taken post-graduate work at Columbia University, New York city.

To round out her training in special phases of cookery, she attended the Iridor School of Cooking, also of New York, acquiring further professional technique in the making of cakes and candies, two phases of the culinary art envied her by most housekeepers who have seen her accomplishments in this field.

TAUGHT THOUSANDS

For 12 years after graduating, Miss Ferguson headed the home economics department of such well known educational centers as the Macdonald Institute at Guelph, Ontario, the Technical High School of Kitchener, Ontario, and the Peterborough, Ontario, Normal School.

In these centers she taught thousands of adults as well as children. Then, wishing to extend her activities to broader fields, Miss Ferguson owned and managed tea rooms in New York, managed large cafeterias and, on the side, was consultant for those interested in club and restaurant work.

Following this business experience in the home economics field, Miss Ferguson wished to have a thorough understanding of the dietary departments in hospitals and for four years directed the administrative and dietetic interests of commissariat departments in hospitals, where she was responsible for feeding 3000 people, three times a day.

HUMAN WELFARE

Being tremendously interested in human welfare, Miss Ferguson has given a great deal of her time in earlier years to night classes in home economics for those who needed the benefit of such education but who could not avail themselves of it otherwise.

Pursuant to this same interest she entered the cooking school field, feeling that to the thousands of homemakers who would attend her lectures she might pass on the very valuable information which she had acquired throughout the years.

MIDWEST GETS CONVENTIONS

By Universal Service

Washington, Oct. 18 — The next president of the United States today seemed certain to be named in either Chicago, where there have been so many past presidential nominations, or in Cleveland, chief city of Ohio, known as the "Mother of Presidents."

Privately, it was learned, both Republicans and Democratic national committees are hoping to throw their 1936 conventions to one of these cities. Either is acceptable to both committees. It is not likely, however, that one city would draw both conventions.

While no final decision will be made by either committee until sessions of the full memberships after January 1, leaders in both parties indicated that neither party will consider sending its convention west of the Mississippi—unless Kansas City should offer inducements.

QUINCY 6 WARD FIGHTERS WIN

The full bench of the Supreme Court today upheld petitioners who had demanded that no increase be made in the number of wards in Quincy.

The decision of the highest court reversed that handed down by Judge James C. Donnelly in Superior Court, who dismissed a petition to prevent the increase from six wards to eight.

The Quincy City Council started the court battle in 1934, when it issued an order creating two wards under a statute of 1888, which fixed the number of wards at six, but authorized changes.

The petitioners cited a later charter, dated 1914, which fixed the divisions permanently.

Own Lawyer Fails In Break Case

George C. Allen, 29, tried his own case in Newton District Court today, where he appeared on a charge of burglary.

Despite his reference to the Bertt-Holway case and many another to support his claim that he was the victim of mistaken identity he was held in $2000 for the grand jury.

Allen, who has a record, according to police, said he was in New York at the time he was alleged to have been breaking into the Chestnut Hill home of Thomas E. Woods, former Yale football star.

BRITISH, ITALY ON EDGE ALONG LIBYAN BORDER

By International News Service

Cairo, Oct. 18—Two British motorized regiments, the Seventh and Eighth Hussars, were under orders today to make ready for a dash to the border of Italian Libya.

Fifty-seven thousand Italian troops are understood to face new British-directed Egyptian defense works along the Cyrenaica frontier in Italian Libya, potential battleground if the economic and financial war Britain is waging on Italy bursts into armed action.

With one British regiment, the famous Seaforth Highlanders, already at Siwa, reinforcing Egyptian infantry and cavalry, and British warships constantly maneuvering off the Suez Canal, it was reported the Egyptian army would be increased by one infantry and one cavalry battalion, and there would be no demobilization this year.

INCREASE GARRISON

Troops now on their way to Egypt will increase the British garrison by an entire brigade.

The first battalion of the Manchester Infantry Regiment is coming to replace the First Battalion of the Royal Scots Fusiliers at Moascar. The Scots will remain in Egypt.

Three more battalions composed of units that started from the East for India, are to be temporarily diverted to stations in Egypt.

These four new battalions will constitute a new brigade, provisionally encamped at Alexandria, and commanded by Brigadier General J. H. T. Priestman.

Other troop concentrations are reported in the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan and Kenya Colony, adjoining Ethiopia and the borders of British Somaliland have been closed.

On the Egypt-Libyan frontier, Egyptian troops, supplied with up-to-date armaments by the British are digging trenches and throwing up barbed-wire defenses.

Headquarters have been established at Mersa Matruh, in the northwest, over which all private or commercial planes have been forbidden to fly since Oct. 13.

A potential source of conflict looms in a move to suspend temporarily "capitulations" which exempt foreigners from the jurisdiction of Egyptian courts, so that martial law might be imposed.

This question bristles with difficulties, because of the estimated population of 80,000 Italians who have large commercial interests here.

NEGOTIATIONS ON

Long conferences on defense are being held every day between government ministers and British officers in the Egyptian army.

Anti-aircraft guns have been placed all about Alexandria, and searchlights cover the harbor.

By day seaplanes maneuver in the port, and at night carry out tactical exercises at Abukir.

Trains of ammunition are said to leave every night for the Libyan border and the Sudan.

By Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 18—A vast area of Northern Africa was drawn today into the war-like picture which hitherto had been confined largely to the borders of Ethiopia.

Reliable sources reported that barbed wire entanglements were stretched along the frontier of Italy's North African possession of Libya, where thousands of troops have been sent, for "security against native elements along the Egyptian border."

General Italo Balbo, leader of the 1933 Transatlantic squadron flight to the United States and governor of Libya, was reported to have inspected his forces on the Libyan-Egyptian frontier.

General Rino Fougier, noted Italian aviator who had been organizing Italian aviation in Tripoli and Cyrenaica into one force, was named commander-in-chief of the North African aviation forces.

The new barricade between Libya and Egypt, now a nominally independent kingdom but once a British protectorate, was reported to exceed 240 miles along the frontier.

Simultaneously, Italians at home assailed the British for refusal to consider withdrawing its naval reinforcements from the Mediterranean in response to a French suggestion, unless Italy reduced its Libyan garrison.

"Our troops were sent to Libya to preserve internal order and security in our colony in the face of unrest among native elements along the Egyptian border," an official said.

"The Libyan forces are the minimum necessary for this purpose. We cannot reduce them as a price for withdrawal of British ships."

High sources described the British policy in the Italo-Ethiopian conflict as one of "contradictions."

"The British government has said it cannot undertake negotiations outside the league," these sources said, "but at the same time we realize that government has sent ships to the Mediterranean and put pressure on us without being asked to do so by the league."

ALREADY BEGUN IN SUEZ

Sources close to the military port of Naples said application of economic sanctions already has begun in the Suez Canal, stepway to East Africa.

Numerous Italian ships sailing this week with more than 18,000 troops to join the army of General Emilio De Bono, commander-in-chief of the northern Ethiopian front, were instructed to take on sufficient fuel and supplies for a round trip.

Shipping sources said this order was necessary because Italian ships had experienced difficulty in obtaining necessary supplies at Suez, and that they might be cut off entirely at any moment.

Italian press dispatches told of continued submission of Ethiopian chiefs as to Italians in the northern Tigre province bordering on Italy's colony of Eritrea.

Italy set up Ras Hailu Solassie (Gugsa), Ethiopian chieftain who came over to the Italian side, as ruler of Tigre province, but an official spokesman said his appointment invested him with a "honorary title" rather than any specific authority.

While Italy thus consolidated its position in the north, its officials reported that Ethiopian forces were massing around Mekale, 60 miles south of Aduwa, where military experts have anticipated a "big battle."

Fire on Duce Other Son

By International News Service

Rome, Oct. 18—Vittorio Mussolini, son of Il Duce, was fired upon by Ethiopians while making a reconnaissance flight today, according to the Asmara correspondent of the newspaper Piccolo.

Vittorio was not hurt, but the bullets pierced the wings of the plane.

Last week Il Duce's other son in East Africa, Bruno, had a similar experience.

Natives Use Guns From 4 Nations

By Associated Press

Rome, Oct. 18—Reliable quarters said today Italian troops in East Africa were receiving fire from guns manufactured by four nations, including Italy.

It was stated weapons captured from the Ethiopians were of Belgian, Belgian, German and Italian makes.

The Italian weapons were believed to be part of the armaments Italy sold to Ethiopia at the time of conclusion of the "treaty of friendship" in 1925.

Ethiopia never paid for them, it was said.

France Demands Britain Renounce Blockade Plan

Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press

Paris, Oct. 18—Premier Laval has asked Great Britain to renounce formally any blockade or individual penalties which might mean war before France promises aid against Italy, authoritative sources said today.

France is withholding its formal reply to Britain's "showdown" demand that she "choose the League of Nations or Italy" until she receives the British government's consent to such terms, those sources said.

The French terms were reported authoritatively to be:

1—France will let the British fleet use her Mediterranean bases and will lend naval aid in case of an Italian attack by Italy if Britain agrees to recall several warships from the Mediterranean in exchange for Italian withdrawal of troops from Cyrenaica, Italian North African colony.

2—France will support Britain fully in application of sanctions if Britain renounces the right to take individual measures and promises not to blockade Italy unless the League so decides.

AGAIN ASKS PEACE TERMS

An unconfirmed report to this circulated that Premier Laval, France's veteran diplomat, has asked Premier Mussolini "for the last time" to state his minimum terms for settlement of the Ethiopian conflict, lest France be forced to abandon conciliation efforts and go the whole way with Great Britain.

Thus, informed sources said, Laval sought to close the breach between Britain and Italy through mutual gestures of good-will while safeguarding the Mediterranean against any naval clash between those two nations.

The British ambassador, Sir George Russel Clerk, was reported authoritatively to have told Laval that if France shirked obligations under the League covenant, Britain might consider itself unable to aid France automatically under the Locarno treaty in the event of a German attack on the continent.

SWINGS TOWARD BRITAIN

Unconfirmed report was that Laval inclined farther toward supporting Britain after General Maxime Weygand told him a split with Britain would lead to a German attack on the continent within two years.

Laval's terms were accepted generally by the French press as meaning the government wanted a strict consultative agreement with Britain under which France would have the right to object to any British action before it started.

Some doubts as to British acceptance of the French terms were indicated since the British were represented as feeling it was up to the individual governments to enforce League sanctions as they saw fit.

AUSTRIA LEANS TO MUSSOLINI AFTER COUP

Copyright, 1935, Associated Press

Vienna, Oct. 18—Prince Ernst Von Starhemberg, close friend of Premier Mussolini of Italy, had gained military ascendancy over his political foes today through a cabine' reorganization.

Political observers said they expected to see even closer co-operation between Austria and Italy.

Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, who owes much of his power to Von Starhemberg's support, shifted his cabinet around yesterday, deposing Major Emil Fey, who long stood in the way of Von Starhemberg's rise.

Monarchists, who long have had in mind a plan to make Archduke Otto King, restoring the Hapsburg throne, were characterized as disappointed by Von Starhemberg's sudden gesture of vast political power and some declared a cautious movement was under way to make the Prince, who is vice-chancellor, the King of Austria

This was renounced in government quarters as "absurd, mischievous, and a fantastic misinterpretation of the quick events of last night."

OPPOSES MONARCHY NOW

The more conservative Monarchists said they did not share their friends' view, but conceded their hopes for an early restoration of Hapsburg rule had suffered a setback

Starhemberg, pictured as friendly to the Monarchists, has said repeatedly the time is not ripe for their return to power. Major Fey, who said in a statement after the cabinet changes that he remained friendly with the chancellor, inclined to the Monarchist movement.

Associated with Adolf Hitler in the 1923 beer parlor putsch, though he wheeled savagely on Nazism later, Starhemberg began an active rapprochement policy with Mussolini late in 1933

The prince set up his own Fascist government in the Tyrol at the time he broke with the assassinated Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss.

The differences between Fey and Starhemberg, said to have been developing since Dollfuss' death, resulted in such a division of the Heimwehr that the vice chancellor prevailed on Chancellor Schuschnigg to strike a blow to end the disaffection.

At the closely guarded chancellery, today, Schuschnigg and Von Starhemberg labored together to reorganize Austria's private armies into a national militia and unify many national activities.

CATHOLICS REASSURED

It was announced Austria's variety of youth movements would be joined so as to work for a common purpose. Heretofore, the Catholic storm troops, the Heimwehr (home guard) and other groups had individual youth organizations.

Roman Catholic elements, who saw their storm trooper and youth organizations slipping from their direct control, were reassured by a statement that Austria would observe to the letter its concordat with the Vatican.

Von Starhemberg long has been known for his close friendship with Il Duce of Italy. The Prince has a personal army of 175,000 Heimwehr soldiers devoted to Fascist principles. It was largely through this army, paid out of his own pocket that he attained political prominence

His trips to Italy, where he often has been entertained by Mussolini, have been frequent

U.S. Pact With London Is Hinted

By International News Service

Washington, Oct. 18—Does a tacit understanding exist between the state department and Great Britain concerning this government's willingness to do everything within its power to prevent American trade from interfering with league penalties against Italy?

The attitude of American officials with respect to European reports that Great Britain and France would shortly ask for this government's support in such sanctions, and certain other factors, gave rise to this startling question today.

Officials, of course, would not admit that any such understanding existed, or that any assurances to that effect had been given Great Britain.

However, they maintained a mysterious serene confidence that Great Britain would not place this government in any embarrassing position by requesting a public declaration concerning the extent to which the United States was prepared to support League sanctions against Italy

Furthermore, they predicted privately that Great Britain would see to it that no other League members made any such request.

DUKE'S FIANCEE Hops to Ill Father

London, Oct. 18 (AP)—Lady Alice Montagus Douglas-Scott, fiancee of the Duke of Gloucester, left Hendon Airdrome today in a plane belonging to the Prince of Wales, to hasten to the bedside of her father, the Duke of Buccleuch, seriously ill at Selkirk, Scotland

A bulletin issued today at Selkirk said the Duke was weaker and his condition was "very grave."

NINE ARRESTED In N. Y. Dope Raid

New York, Oct. 18 (INS)—Wartime vigilance on the part of European customs inspectors is causing a shortage of narcotics in the underworlds of American cities, federal agents revealed today after a series of raids in which they arrested three men and six women.

U. S. FIRMS HALT SHIPMENTS

Washington, Oct. 18—The Senate Munitions Committee was disclosed today to have received notice from several industrial concerns that they have ceased shipping products to Italian Africa.

Stephen Raushenbush, chief investigator who is now in the field, announced through his office here that the committee had received a letter from the Ford Motor Company notifying it of such action.

The names of other concerns taking such action were not made pub-

It was the tenth anniversary of the foundation of Il Duce's famous public safety corps

Four companies of police on bicycles wheeled by in perfect alignment preceded by bugle corps. Then came two companies of motorcycle police, eight abreast, and then twelve baby tanks.

Next came 21 trucks filled with helmeted stalwarts ready for riot duty. They were followed by ambulances, a company of tear gas throwers, and a detachment of huskies carrying what seemed to be batterin rams and scaling ladders.

Next came mounted police at a police were armed with short stocky carbines Mussolini sat on his horse, centaur-like, in his uniform as general commandant of the Fascist militia

BRITISH-RUMAN CLASH BREAKS UP LEAGUE MEETING

FIGHT OVER COMPENSATION FOR LOSS OF ITALY TRADE

By International News Service

Geneva, Oct. 18—A meeting of a League of Nations sub-committee broke up in disorder today with a clash between Britain and Rumania when Britain balked at compensating small nations due to suffer financially from applying economic sanctions against Italy.

The economic sub-committee had been studying a proposal to compensate the small nations for their losses. Captain Anthony Eden, British delegate, arose suddenly and in a surprise move declared angrily he did not see why any powers should be compensated for such losses.

As Captain Eden spoke sat down, Nicholas Titulescu, Rumanian foreign minister jumped up and retorted that if England were ed application of the League pact, it must be applied fully in the case of all concerned.

RUMANIA WALKS OUT

Paragraph three of the article of the League provides for compensation declared. After making his statement he walked out.

The meeting then was temporarily suspended.

It was a secret session, but of the quarrel leaked out the amused atch.

Captain Eden had said that would accept no financial agreement concerning the small powers likely to be hurt by cutting off their trade with Italy.

He declared members of the League must realize their responsibilities and make sacrifices for the sake of the covenant.

It was understood Eden pointed out that Britain had already taken means of enforcing the sanctions by sending part of her home fleet to the Mediterranean for the support of the League and that this had cost "plenty."

EDEN'S CONTENTION

Therefore, he declared I smaller powers lose a little through sanctions it still would not be nearly as great as Britain's loss.

Then it was that Titulescu jumped with the implication that only England wanted sanctions against Italy. Great confusion followed.

The incident recalled the reply made in Rome when the League voted sanctions against Italy. Italian statesmen said that non effective boycott of Italy could not be carried out because of the economic harm it would do those small countries taking part in it.

When the question of compensation was mentioned, Rome declared no country, including Britain and France, would want to "foot the bill" for such compensation.

3 BRANDED "DESERTERS"

Earlier today Austria, Hungary and Albania, which stand with Italy against sanctions, were tacitly branded "deserters" of the League and covenant breakers.

Fearing that Italy's friends would frustrate embargoes imposed by the 49 other nations of the League, the economic sanctions sub-committee approved a plan to frustrate re-shipment of goods to Italy through the three "deserter" nations.

Adopting a long list of goods to Italy, the sub-committee first before the full agenda committee a proposal that Austria, Hungary and Albania henceforth be allowed to import quantities equal to their average imports over the last three years.

If the sanction committee approves the sub-committee's plan, as expected, the "deserters" will then have only enough of these commodities for their own uses.

This would go a long way toward eliminating Austria as a corridor for shipments from Germany to Italy, although there will be no way to limit purchases in Germany by Austria.

But if, for instance, Austrian imports of coal from Germany exceed the three-year average, Britain and other sources of coal will immediately cut off their supplies, leaving Austria wholly dependent on Germany.

In taking this action, the economic subcommittee acted on the accusation of Foreign Commissar Maxim Litvinoff of Russia, [illegible]

FOREIGN FUNDS DELUGE BANKS IN WALL ST.

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 18—Large Wall Street banks are being deluged with foreign funds.

The fact that gold imports since Labor Day have exceeded $350,000,000 provides a fair indicator

While most international banking quarters assert a major war in Europe in the immediate future is unlikely, they acknowledge the piling up of foreign funds in New York is a clear indication European capitalists are fearful.

"Here is a check for about $150,000 just received from Paris," commented one banker. "Here is another for somewhat less from Brussels.

"Tomorrow I am receiving an account of a few million dollars from London. It is the same story in most of the big banks."

Of course, this inflow is not due solely to war fears. Part of it represents sending money here for investment by foreign capitalists who think recovery prospects in the United States are brighter than elsewhere.

Part of it represents funds from gold standard countries sent here in fear of currency devaluation at home.

As far as the gold movement is concerned, it is an immediate reflection of exchange operations.

When the London gold price, or the ratio of gold standard currencies to dollars, makes it profitable to import gold and sell it to the U. S. treasury, banking houses automatically undertake those transactions.

Much of the gold is coming from France. Italy has been selling gold to the Bank of France to get exchange to pay for war purchases.

Close Watch Kept on Bank Deals With Italy

By Associated Press

Washington, Oct. 18—The New York Federal Reserve Bank, fiscal agent for the Treasury, is reported making a daily check on financial transactions between American banks and Italy and Ethiopia.

It is understood the object is to obtain information concerning possible munitions sales to either country in violation of President Roosevelt's arms embargo.

The Reserve Bank's report also would permit careful watch over any transactions that might be in violation of the Johnson Act, which prohibits foreign nations in default to the United States on war debts from floating loans in this country.

Italy, Great Britain, France and other major European powers are in default.

Marconi Ray All Set To Do Work in War

By Associated Press

Genoa, Italy, Oct. 18—Guglielmo Marconi, reported to have been turning radio into a weapon of warfare, sought an interview with Premier Mussolini today to offer his services with troops in East Africa.

The inventor of wireless already had volunteered to take his place with the Fascist forces warring on Ethiopia when he sailed for Brazil last month. He returned yesterday.

Marconi's experiments with the micro-wave, latest of his developments in the field of wireless transmission, led to conjecture as to the nature of his work should he be attached to the communication branch of the expeditionary army.

The usefulness of the waves, only 60 centimeters long, was demonstrated to several motorists last May when the scientist showed Il Duce his latest contrubition.

The motorists, on the Rome-Ostia highway, discovered their motors stopped suddenly, refused to yield to any persuasion and then suddenly started again.

That demonstration coincided with reports that Marconi was experimenting to determine whether he could stop airplanes in the air.

The micro-wave radiophone can be transported on a few pack mules. A set with a range of 100 miles or more costs about $20,000.

U. S. ENVOY GETS Bomb Promise

Rome, Oct. 18 (US)—American Ambassador Long and representatives of other countries with legations in Addis Ababa were given assurance that the Ethiopian capital and Diredawa will not be bombed by Italian air squadrons, providing both cities are not made troop bases or munitions depots.

The ambassadors and ministers were assured that the Italian government has already ordered its air force to spare the two cities as long as the conditions stipulated are maintained.

O.K. Penalties

Geneva, Oct. 18 (AP)—The Swedish government today decided to put into operation the League of Nation's first sanction against Italy—the lifting of the arms embargo from Ethiopia and applying it to Italy.

Oslo, Oct. 18 (INS)—The Norwegian government today ordered an embargo upon shipments of arms to Italy, in accordance with Sanction No. 1 adopted by the League of Nations.

ROOSEVELT MAY CUT VACATION TRIP SHORT

Washinton, Oct. 18—Disturbed by conditions abroad, President Roosevelt will abandon his intended leisurely cruise up the Atlantic coast and will board a special train at a Gulf port for a rush trip back to Washington, according to private advices in official circles.

The reports, which were not confirmed officially, were that Mr. Roosevelt will disembark from the cruiser Houston, probably at Mobile, Ala., for a quick train trip to the capital to check up at first hand on the European situation as it affects the United States.

It had been planned for the Chief Executive to continue his vacation cruise past the Florida keys and up the Atlantic to Annapolis, Md., an hours motor ride from Washington.

This would require several additional days from the Panama Canal near where the President was fishing today. Mobile is on a direct line between Panama and Washington for a ship-train trip.

Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to the President, announced that he understood there had been no change in the President's plans to return to Washington by leisurely stages around the Florida keys and up the Atlantic coast.

BRITAIN, ALARMED AT WAR PERIL, DEFENDS STAND

By International News Service

London, Oct. 18—The British government, it was indicated plainly today, is frankly alarmed at the specter of war with Italy, and is taking steps to cool the flames of international animosities which might easily and suddenly be whipped into war-frenzied hatreds.

The British were banned in high quarters last night from taking up the anti-British war fever which admittedly exists throughout Italy.

In an effort to ameliorate the growing Anglo-Italian tension, a compromise reaffirmation of the position of the British government in the Italo-Ethiopian dispute was issued to the British and the foreign press today from the highest authoritative source.

It was declared Britain does not have any intention of taking unilateral action against Italy, as the Italian press repeatedly has charged.

[illegible]

"Unfortunately," said an official high in government circles, "these dangerous ideas have been strengthened with and fostered by the French press, which has proceeded deliberately to allege Captain Eden (Anthony Eden, British minister for League affairs) has taken the initiative at Geneva, and that Britain has been intent on dragging Italy into a choice between humiliation and war.

"That is why it is the authoritative view in this country that these absurd conceptions should be cleared up, and that the doubts which the attitude of the French press has created in the minds of the people of this country 'definitely' removed."

How Powers Line Up as World War Looms

Major alignment of new balance of war power in East Africa and the Mediterranean is affected by recent moves of European nations as indicated by news dispatches. Italy and Great Britain mass troops in menacing concentration on the borders of Libya and Egypt. France asks withdrawal of British super-fleets from Mediterranean and Red Sea. Arms are reported being rushed through British Somaliland into Ethiopia. Germany is believed to have promised Italy supplies and munitions. Political unrest in Austria threatens a spark to ignite the conflagration.

Italians Hunt Gas for Planes

Purchase of gasoline for the planes was reported to be becoming a difficult problem because Suez refineries were selling only to cash

FLIER KILLED In Antenna Crash

Mason, O., Oct. 18 (AP)—An airplane pilot tentatively identified by Marshal Richard Cox as O. K. Bevins of Ft. Thomas, Ky., crashed to death in his plane during a heavy fog near here today.

Cox said he was told the plane struck a radio tower. Mason is about 25 miles northwest of Cincinnati.

ITALIAN LINER BLAST KILLS 6

By International News Service

Alexandria, Egypt, Oct. 18—Within a few hundred yards of British warships in the harbor here the 12,905-ton Italian passenger ship Ausonia today caught fire after two boiler explosions.

Six members of the crew were killed and 20 injured.

British naval picket boats aped to the liner and took off the passengers.

Listing heavily, the Ausonia was towed to shallow water and continued to burn.

The explosions occurred as the ship entered port after a voyage from Haifa, Palestine.

Lloyd's register lists the ship as built in 1928 and owned by Lloyd Triestino. She is powered by six steam turbines and burns oil fuel. She is not the Ausonia of the Cunard-White Star line.

BUTLER WARNS U. S. OF WAR

By Associated Press

Newton Square, Pa., Oct. 18—Major-General Smedley D. Butler, calling Ethiopian warfare "sideshow maneuvers" compared to the statement "racket" at Geneva, declared today that League of Nations penalties are dangerous.

"If it were not for the League sanctions program," the retired Marine Corps officer said in an interview, "there would be only two nations involved right now—Great Britain and Italy—instead of more than 50.

"The United States can't keep out if Europe works up to a general war and if martial propaganda is fed to our people."

Fashionables Attend Lecture By Admiral Byrd

By BETTY ALDEN

"GOSH, AND WE KICKED at shovelling a little sidewalk last winter," exclaimed almost everyone who attended the lecture by Admiral Richard E. Byrd at Symphony Hall last evening . . . For the motion pictures of the Antarctic expedition showed that the men did little else but shovel snow eight hours a day, seven days a week . . .

It made one chilly just to sit and watch the pictures of snow shifting across ice packs, burying the expedition's houses, drifting fifteen to twenty feet above them and hearing the admiral mention casually that it was 60, or 80 or even 90 degrees below zero when some of the pictures were taken . . .

LOUISE STEVENS

Many of the society women who had come to enjoy the lecture and in so doing benefit the Sunnyside Day Nursery, picked their fur capes and evening wraps from the backs of the chairs and draped them around their shoulders to stifle the sympathetic shivers that the pictures of the frozen ice expanse brought forth . . .

A bevy of the season's prettiest debutantes did a rushing business selling nosegays in the lobby of Symphony Hall before the lecture began . . . and few could resist the high-pressure salesmanship of Anne Soule, a dainty little girl in powder blue metal cloth with silver buttons down the front of the blouse; Anne Howard in a sleek black dinner gown; Louise Stevens, whose brown velvet dinner gown had very demure collar and cuffs of white silk; Anne Clark and Barbara Brewer, both in black velvet; winsome Betsy Jaques whose black velvet dress was piped with bands of white silk; Mary Ross in a black gown trimmed with braided bands of gold cloth to match her golden tiara and Alice Burrage who also wore a combination of black and gold . . .

Much credit is due Mrs. Robert Knowles of Beverly Farms and Marlborough street, chairman of the committee for the evening's performance, for her success in rallying a peppy committee to assist her in carrying their plans to a successful conclusion . . . She was a very attractive figure in a midnight blue gown trimmed with many rows of tiny ruffles, over which she wore a luxurious silver fox cape . . .

• • •

Lucille Swift in the Audience

ONE OF HER ABLEST assistants, Mrs. Herbert Jaques, was also very charming in a black taffeta gown trimmed with diagonal stripes of iridescent blue and red beads . . . Mrs. Thomas Blumer of Beverly Farms wore a filmy frock of black lace with a wide and trailing green sash . . .

Mrs. William Endicott's auburn locks reflected some of the glints of her silver gown, and Mrs. William Brace Pratt wore an unusual gown of bottle green with heavy fringe falling from the waistline to her ankles . . .

Others in the large and very fashionable gathering were Mrs. George Swift with her daughter, Lucille, both wearing heavily furred evening wraps . . . Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr, the latter in a plum velvet gown under a black fur cape . . . Mrs. Walter I. Badger, who wore a silver mesh Juliet cap studded with rhinestones.

Miss Alice Jaques attended with Miss Eleanor Clark of Philadelphia, who has come on to be the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Jaques for Betsy's coming-out party tomorrow evening at The Brookline Country Club . . . Herbert Jaques, Jr., and another young man escorted them . . . Daphne Brooks dashed in with her little sister, Violet, and also there were Mrs. George Saltonstall West with Mrs. A. L. West Movius, Lee McKean and Marie Turner, who motored up from the North Shore for the occasion . . . Barbara Reynolds, in a violet gown and accompanied by a crowd of young friends . . . Anne Hutchins, one of the season's debs, wore a long mink wrap, and Mrs. Dunbar Lockwood was very dressy in all white . . . Marion Lawrence wore a moire robe de style of sapphire blue, and Marietta Howe, an animated little deb with a fluffy bang, was in a silver cloth dress . . . Polly Ehrlich, Elise Sortwell and Mrs. Barrett Wendell were others there . . .

• • •

What the Fashionables Are Doing

MRS. CONNIE HARPER TYLER of Philadelphia is here for a short visit with her family, the Richard Harpers of Milton . . .

Venturing far from the protected confines of his home town of Hamilton, Sewall Barrell, brother of Mrs. Joe Woods, is sending home lots of bright postcards from the quaint resorts he is visiting in South America . . .

• • •

The Dudley Wolfes have gone to Scotland on a shooting trip, but will soon return to this country to round up the entries for the skiing and skating Olympics in Switzerland in mid-winter . . .

Mrs. Wolfe is chairman of the invitation committee of the Amateur Skiing Club of America and she has already chosen Marian McKeen, Faith Donaldson and Mary Bird to compete in the Olympics . . .

Maribel Vinson, Boston's queen of the ice and former Olympic champion, will again be entered in skating events, as will Grace and Jimmie Madden, two other famous Boston skaters . . .

Maribel is carving out a journalistic career in New York now, so her hours of practicing turns on the ice are limited to whatever time she can spare from her work on one of Gotham's largest papers . . .

Martha Lee's Chat

Apples of all colors and flavors are now waiting your choice at the market stalls.

The choice of the apple depends on its eating or cooking qualities. There are both kinds. For baking the Rhode Island Greening is very good. The Roman Beauty is considered the best baking apple. The Baldwin, Wineasp, Jonathan and McIntosh [illegible] apples, that is, they can be used for either cooking or eating, with the delicious a fine eating apple.

Apples should be [illegible] cooked; that is, with as little water as possible and not for too long, in order to retain the fresh taste. Season the fruit mildly so as not to cover up its own flavor. For baked apples, or sauced apples, choose an apple with a [illegible] shape.

Cook them in their own steam, in a covered pan, for a very short time. Sweeten the sauce after cooking, but not so much that the sugar will hide the flavor. Add a few grains of salt. If the apples have not been peeled or cored before cooking, put the sauce through a colander. Try [illegible] sauce folded into whipped cream in tart shells for dessert.

The fancy glazed apples seen in some of the restaurant windows are "baked" on top of the stove. They are cooked in a syrup of sugar and water (1 cup sugar to 1 cup water) with the skins peeled one-third of the way down on the stem end. Place over a low heat and baste continually with the syrup until tender but still whole. About 15 minutes. Turn once during cooking.

For apple pie, either type of apple can be chosen. That is, an apple which will retain its shape or one which cooks down to a sauce. Sprinkle the apples with sugar a little cinnamon, nutmeg and nut meat dot with butter. Pile the apples high in the center of the pan, as they will shrink when heated. Brown sugar may be used for sugar.

A good flavor, or grated cheese may be sprinkled over the apples or in the pastry for a variation of flavor.

Here is a recipe for Apples-on-the-Stick, for which we are having many requests lately. With Halloween near at hand, you may want to tuck this away for use at that time.

APPLE-ON-THE-STICK

6 apples (small, red)
12 dates
½ cup nut meats
6 wooden skewers
1 cup brown sugar
½ cup water

Wipe and remove cores from apples, stone dates, chop both dates and nuts, mix, and use to fill cavities in apples. Cook sugar and water until brittle when tried in cold water. Put a skewer in each apple, dip apple in syrup; when covered, remove and cool.

Following a meeting yesterday of motion picture theater owners and exhibitors of New England at the office of T. F. O'Toole, New England head of Columbia Pictures, Junior Adventurers had their Boston beginning.

ANGELLO IN CHARGE

Enthusiasm among the exhibitors attending the meeting in O'Toole's office where the outline of the organization's objectives was presented by Sidney Angello, special representative of Gallup.

In co-operation with O'Toole, Angello will direct the preliminary activities in the organization of Juvenile Adventurers Clubs in every New England city and town between Boston and the border.

Following the first meeting, Joseph M. Levenson, president of Strand Theaters organization and Max Finn, general manager of the E. M. Loew Theaters, gave immediate indorsement of the idea.

"The principle aims of the Juvenile Adventurers Club are all that can be desired by a parent," Mr. Levenson declared, "I am urging all our New England managers to commence organization of local clubs at once. In it I see the solution of the children's picture problem."

Other leading exhibitors of the New England area in attendance at the meeting in addition to Levenson and Finn included Harry Zeitz, New Bedford Theaters; Dick Rubin, State Theater, Saugus; Walter Littlefield, Fairmount Theater, Hyde Park; R. W. Markell of the Porter Theater, Cambridge; George Randell, Granada Theater, Malden, and Irving Green of Melrose.

CONTESTS FEATURED

The weekly meetings at the theaters, it was explained by the Columbia Pictures' officials, are to feature shows and contests in tap, ring, roller skating, feats of magic, animal circuses, radio announcing and other hobbies of the Adventurers. In addition a full program of adventurous motion picture tales and travelogues.

A national boat building contest already begun, for which four national prizes—trips to Bermuda are to be given in addition to local awards; a treasure hunt and other contests will be announced shortly.

Also National Headquarters, presided over by Bruce Gallup, plans to provide stories of adventures in real life, which are in themselves lessons in aviation, science, magic, fire-fighting, exploration and the like.

(Watch for this column in the Boston Evening American each Friday for news of the great Junior Adventurers' Club sponsored by Columbia Pictures Corporation.)

HOTEL FIRE PROBED

Osterville, Oct. 18—Investigation was begun today into the blaze which destroyed Cape Cod's swank summer resort, West Bay Inn. Damage was estimated at $50,000.

The hotel was due to go on line a season hence, after two days in a succession of fires. Edward S. Crocker, of this city, founded it 25 years ago.

Less than a half hour after firemen from Osterville, Hyannis, and Centerville reached the hotel, fire had wrecked the building.

The flames, of undetermined origin, started on the ground floor and were discovered by a passerby.

MAN GUILTY In 50-Cent Killing

New York, Oct. 18—An argument over 50 cents was responsible for the conviction of James Graham, 22, a laborer, for manslaughter in the first degree by a general sessions jury.

Testimony indicated that Graham had stabbed to death his brother-in-law, John Deane, 25, after the latter accused him of stealing 50 cents from him.

BAY STATE LAW EYED

New York, Oct. 18—Louis H. Pink, state superintendent of insurance, advocated before the Rotary Club of Brooklyn a policy of watchful waiting upon Massachusetts before invoking compulsory automobile insurance in New York.

"Before altering the fundamental basis of our automobile law, which is working with reasonable satisfaction," Pink said, "let us profit by the experience of Massachusetts. While the law is beneficial in its purpose, there are many practical difficulties, and that state is today divided as to whether compulsory automobile insurance should be continued."

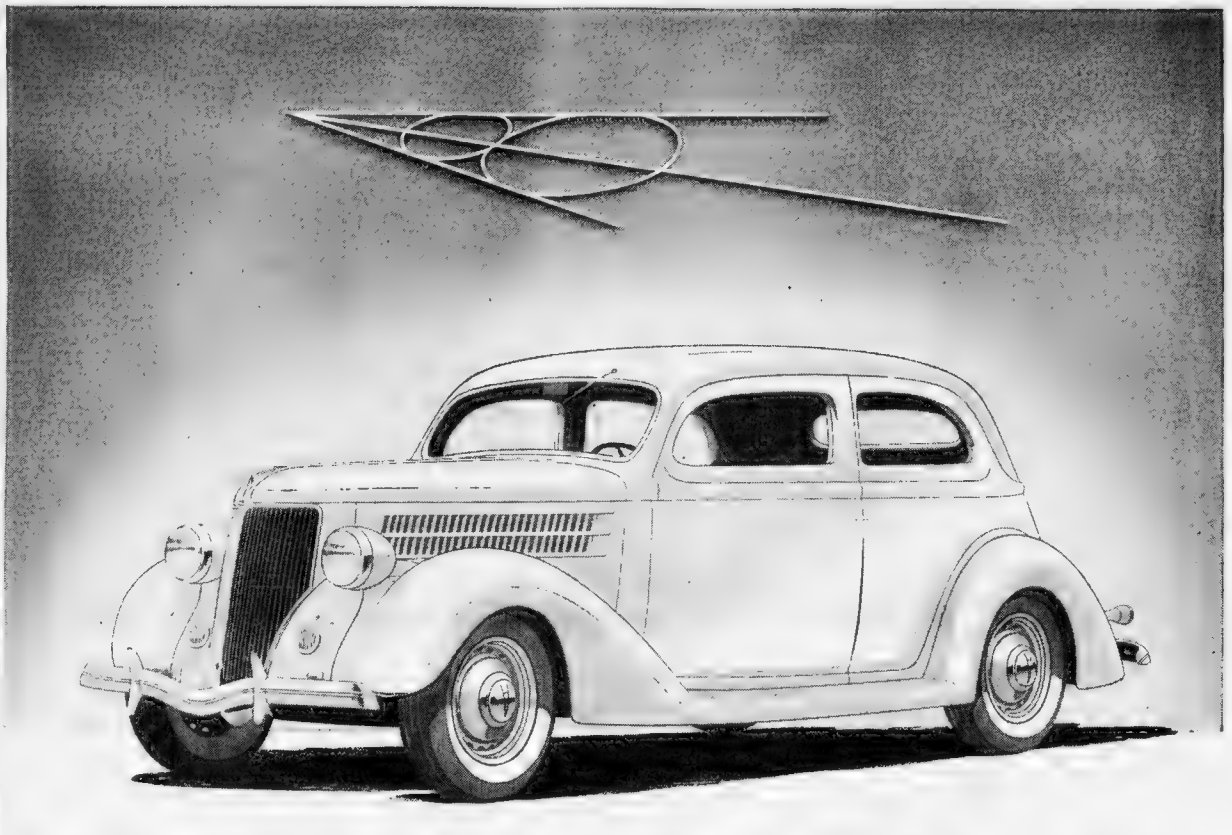
INTRODUCED TOMORROW



THE NEW FORD V·8 FOR 1936

Why do we say The New Ford V-8 for 1936?

What is new about it?

Of course, the newest engine in the low-price car field is still the V-8 engine. Since Ford made it available to all car users (keeping it as economical as cars with fewer cylinders) the Ford V-8 has been the newest engine on the market, and remains the newest for 1936.

You may buy a car on minor "talking points"—some specially advertised feature "with the car thrown in"—but, after all, it is the engine you buy when you buy a car. Hence we put the engine first.

Other new points about the car make a long list.

Its lines are much more beautiful. The hood is longer and sweeps forward over the distinctive new radiator grille, giving the car a length and grace that are instantly impressive. The fenders are larger, with a wide flare. Horns are concealed behind circular grilles beneath the headlamps. New steel wheels.

Ford upholstery—always of sterling quality and excellent taste—is rich and enduring. The appointments of the car have a new touch of refinement. There is no question about the increased beauty of the Ford V-8 for 1936.

In more practical matters, many improvements have been made—Steering is made easier by a new steering gear ratio. The cooling system circulates 5½ gallons of water through a new, larger radiator. Natural thermo-syphon action is assisted by two centrifugal water pumps. New hood louvres permit a rapid air-flow around the engine.

Easier, quieter shifting of Ford gears—The gear shift lever now travels a shorter distance.

The two qualities you want in brakes—Brakes that stop the car with ease and certainty. Ford Super-Safety Brakes of the long-tested, fool-proof, mechanical design.

Safety—as always—in the electrically welded genuine steel body. Safety Glass all around at no extra cost. Hundreds have written grateful letters because this glass has protected the safety of their families.

A car you can drive without strain all day, if you like, in city or country. Steady, holds the road, responds to the driver's touch like a well-trained horse. You don't have to "push" or "fight" the Ford V-8—driver and car easily get on terms of good understanding with each other.

An engine has much to do with the roominess of a car. Very much indeed. A long engine uses up car space. The compact V-8 engine permits much of the ordinary engine space to be used by passengers.

It really is a great car in every way, this 1936 Ford V-8—the finest, safest, most dependable Ford car ever built. On display tomorrow by Ford dealers.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

On tomorrow, the 19th of October, the city of Quincy and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts will celebrate the two hundredth anniversary of the birth of John Adams, second President of the United States, who was born on October 30th, old style.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

To attempt to mention John Adams in a few hundred words is like trying to dip up the Atlantic Ocean in a teaspoon. He was a great constitutional lawyer, but he was a still greater individualist.

He was daring; he undertook the defense of British soldiers in the most unpopular cause ever tried in Boston—the Boston massacre. He was long headed; according to one of his biographers, Samuel McCoy, it was he who against the opposition of his own colony's delegation put through the nomination by which George Washington was elected head of the armies of the American colonies.

More than either John Paul Jones or Jack Barry he deserved the name of the father of the American navy; it was due to his activities on the Naval Committee of the Congress that on November 25, 1775, five American ships of war were fitted out, and even before that Captain John Manly—a Yankee—had raised the first American flag on a sloop of war. Adams always denied both John Paul Jones' and John Barry's claim to priority, saying: "I assert that the first American flag was raised by John Manly and the first British flag struck to him."

As President Performs Second Greatest Service

But this was only the beginning of the career of the man who described himself as looking like "a short, thick Archbishop of Canterbury." He was one of the chief brain and energy centers of that curious and rather inefficient body known as the Continental Congress. He was on the committee to draft the Declaration, and although the phrasing may have been Jefferson's—after Locke and others—the debate before adoption was handled chiefly by John Adams. He was instrumental in bringing about the final peace and appeared confidently before George III as the first ambassador from the new country to England.

As President, for his unpopular term, he performed perhaps the second greatest service for his country. When ever demagogic and popular interest was pushing the young nation into a war with France, it was John Adams who put his ears back and dug his toes in and stopped it.

There are some historians, though, who believe that even greater than that act was the one he performed on the very last day of his term of office—late that evening, with Jefferson's step already on the threshold, when he appointed an old Revolutionary soldier, John Marshall, chief justice of the United States. That appointment decided the course of our constitutional law for the most difficult generation in the life of the infant country.

Of the utmost interest to people who have any sense of or curiosity about political temperament is his long controversy with Jefferson over political theory. Jefferson was a follower of John Locke, who believed that man is, naturally, good and improvable by wise education. Equality was a mystical gift of God, hence government can safely be trusted to the common people.

Would Have Liked More Formal Ceremony

John Adams was a hard-boiled old realist. He denied, philosophically at least, the doctrine of equality, with the result that unpopularity overshadowed the old man's last years. He would have liked more formality and ceremony in our public life than existed even under Washington. He highly approved the Senate as the representative of the wealth, birth, talents and brains of society.

In a famous passage, he pointed out that votes may be won by any one of many means, good, bad and indifferent, and that the inevitable progress of democracy is to line up the people's representatives in two large parties, each following a demagogue. Like all the Adamses he was uncompromising and incorruptible, and he probably foresaw more clearly than any of his generation the way in which the sublime and idealistic theory of Jefferson was bound to decay and decline into the partisan machine politics of modern America.

He had the good fortune to marry one of the most brilliant and able of American women, the famous Abigail. He had the good fortune to see his brilliant and unpopular son sit in his seat and later devote himself to his great fight against the sable genius of the South. And more and more his thoughtful critics are inclined to believe him correct in his views of our democracy.

WIDOW'S LOVE STORY

9-Word Will Hides Man's $20,000

Clarence B. Ryder's nine-word will, containing the single bequest, his three-year-old car to Mrs. Sadie Smith of Lynn, and ignoring the existence of nearly $20,000 cash in Nova Scotian banks drew from Mrs. Smith today an interesting tale of romance that started in a Lynn cemetery.

Ryder who died June 23 at 62 was a shoeworker seemingly worried about his $10 job. He never mentioned money to Mrs. Smith. The latter lives at 16 Houston street and was widowed five years ago.

About three years ago he and the widow Smith met in Pine Grove Cemetery while each was visiting the grave of a departed spouse. Their mutual melancholy drew them together.

"We went together a lot after that," Mrs. Smith said today. "I told him I would never marry again and we never talked of matrimony or money.

"I used to visit him after working hours in his house in Friend street and fix up his finger nails when he came from his work.

"He was always worried about losing his job—though it only averaged wages of about $10 a week. Later he bought a 1932 auto and we often went for rides together—but he always told anxn we met that the car was mine.

"Mr. Ryder said he would like to take a trip in the car to Nova Scotia, but was afraid he'd lose his work if he went."

Subsequently Ryder fell ill and was nursed by Mrs. Smith she said. When his condition grew worse he was taken to Lynn Hospital, and two days before he died he wrote his will.

To Sadie Smith of Lynn by auto of 1932" was all it said.

Attorney George F. Hogan, of Lynn, who filed it for probate said the testator told him he wanted no executor.

His information to the Probate Court came in connection with the filing of an appearance by the collegiates under the will in opposition to application by Mrs. Ends V. Heath, a sister, 4 Smith street, Lynn, to be appointed administratrix.

Conflict over the $20,000 appealed likely.

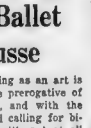
HOLLAND

YANKEE Among Stars Of Ballet Russe

Since dancing as an art is no longer the prerogative of the fair sex, and with the modern trend calling for bi-sexual ballet, it's not at all amazing to discover a "hill-billy" from South Carolina in Colonel de Basil's Ballet Russe of Monte Carlo.

The ballet will tenant the Boston Opera House for seven performances, beginning Tuesday evening, October 29, and with them will be Roland Guerard.



George Holland

Young Mr. Guerard, whose name certainly sounds as Gallic as the left bank of the Seine, really hails from Urbana Charleston. His mother and father were descendants of the old French Huguenots who settled in Charleston long before Catfish Row versed to the left with an antique shop, a book store and the strong Heyward-Gershwin flavor of folk lore and opera.

Like most small boys, and pretty much to his despair, I imagine, Roland went to dancing school, where despite his vigorous interest in more manly pursuits, he showed marked proclivities for cart-wheels and other terpsichorean specialties. The acrobat in him, no doubt.

When the family moved to New York, Roland was twelve, and his father sternly laid down the law. Dancing was not a red-blooded pastime for boys.

• • •

Young Guerard studied consecutively chemical engineering, commercial law and accounting. They didn't take. It took a lot of convincing, but when Fokine, Chester Hale and Adolf Bolm had had unusual talents as a dancer, parental resistance weakened and Roland went to Paris.

He had fifty dollars in his pocket. Even when the franc is good, that won't buy many chestnuts in the Bois.

However, before the sous were gone, he signed up with a French-Russian ballet troupe embarking for South America.

Colonel de Basil found him in 1931. Now he's a dancer of major roles with the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe and has astonished critics everywhere with his knife-sharp leaps and turns, seemingly effortless and affording an almost static effect in the air—which was the genius of Nijinsky.

His tennis is excellent and he likes wild west stories, which with his dancing is as neat a combination of athlete and aesthetic talents as I'd look for.

Farce Hit On Twin Screens

By JOYCE DANA

You won't turn a deaf ear to the girls in the kitchen after seeing "Personal Maid's Secret," which opened at the Paramount and Fenway yesterday.

Here's one of the liveliest of comedies softened a bit in spots by a dash of sentimentality, but paced mostly for laughs.

Margaret Lindsay, one of the screen's prettiest stars, and a personable newcomer named Warren Hull are the struggling married couple who fly through Park avenue society with the greatest of ease, thanks to a wise and wary lady named Lizzie who presides in the kitchen, played to the hilt by Ruth Donnelly.

Lizzie knows her way around, having served morning pick-me-ups to Park avenuers for too many hangover mornings. When the newlyweds start living up to Lizzie, mama invests her savings in rameikins and candelabras, and pays sells more insurance.

Everything is hilariously helped along by Arthur Treacher, as the snooty butler in celluloid, and Lizzie's big moment besides.

A small boy with a predilection for Lenox avenue's best and blackest, and the saccharine charms of Anita Louise, an unpleasant little dot who takes the news that her mother's a mere housekeeper as a major calamity, add varying highlights here and there.

You won't want to bother to look for the lemon which is unobtrusively tucked behind the comedy. But you'll have a good time and a good laugh at "Personal Maid's Secret." The title is an undeserving bid for something a bit risque that happily isn't there.

• • •

The companion picture, "This Is the Life," gives little Jane Withers a chance to dance, sing, and bring tears to your eyes. She's a cute little trick, without Shirley Temple's pretty curly hair to be sure, but a talented miss even when she has to cry her eyes out.

Jane is a little runaway from a couple of chiseling foster parents, who exploit her theatrical charms for cash. She meets John McGuire, he meets Sally Blane, and with some ramblings through the corn-fields and the intercession of a few fellow friends, everything comes out all right.

Sidney Toler and Francis Ford add a good deal of excellent comedy.

Warner Epic

Warner Brothers' long-awaited Shakespearian film drama, "A Midsummer Night's Dream," will open at the Majestic Theater on November 8.

The famous Max Reinhardt is the producer, and his is the first attempt to bring a classic of this nature to the screen in its original form.

Reinhardt agreed to embark on "A Midsummer Night's Dream" only if Warner Brothers would provide every mechanical and technical necessity to make the picture authentic.

Romances of the Past and the Present

CAROLE LOMBARD FRED MacMURRAY

Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray take love lightly in the new film comedy, "Hands Across the Table," now at the Metropolitan.

HENRY WILCOXON LORETTA YOUNG

Henry Wilcoxon and Loretta Young are the royal lovers in the Cecil B. De Mille screen spectacle, "The Crusades," now playing twice daily at the Majestic.

Notes on Music

At today's concert by the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Symphony Hall, the second of the season's series, Dr. Serge Koussevitzky conducts "La Peri," the last orchestral score by the noted French composer, Paul Dukas, who died last May.

The late composer won international fame for his Scherzo, "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," first presented in 1897, which has become one of the most popular of modern orchestral classics.

"La Peri" is designated as a "danced poem." Its most recent performance at these concerts was in the spring of 1928.

New Show at Boston

By HARRIS MORGAN

The question as to whither we are drifting, which proves so worrisome to serious souls, is beginning to own a rival in the entertainment world. Whither vaudeville and the people who earn a living at it is bound, is a question causing lusty sighs and hungry gnawings at the midriff.

It is gratifying to report, then, that the new stage revue at the Keith Boston, Les Marcus' "Continental Revue" is up to the excellent standard of entertainment which the theater has set for itself in the past few weeks.

It has considerable verve, a lot of very handsome girls, some talented dancing and an extravagant measure of clever and wholly — Praise be — low-brow comedy.

Perhaps the most talented member of the troupe is Leon Miller, who is not only a superb eccentric dancer, but a comedian whose quaint madness knows no bounds. His satire on ballroom dancing, with a partner who towers over him like the inevitability of taxes and poor relations, is quite grand.

Then there is a tri-partite fan dance performed by Messrs. Ben MacAtee, Dave Harvey and Harold Boyd, which, as they intended it, is a fan dance to end all fan dances. If there could be anything funnier than this performance, it would be to see it in the company of Miss Sally Rand.

The Four Knutty Knockabouts provide a lot of comic acrobatics. Other good acts of all kinds are Sharon De Vries, Les Sechrist, Arthur Stanley, Kae Whitmore, the Dancing Ambroses, the Silver Goddess—a lady in a trimly fitting coat of argent paint, the Ming Sisters, and many more.

The film attraction this week is a football story, "Fighting Youth," featuring Charles Farrell

Hollywood

Stars Share Laurels

Hollywood, Oct. 17—What's happened to Hollywood temperament? On the heels of Miriam Hopkins' request to co-star with Merle Oberon come two more of our most popular feminine starts who are not only willing but anxious to share honors.

Irene Dunne

Irene Dunne will join Ann Harding in heading the cast of Zoe Akins' Pulitzer prize play, "The Old Maid." Irene will play Charlotte Lovell created by Helen Menken on the stage and Ann will be Delia, which Judith Anderson did in the theater.

Both Ann Harding and Irene Dunne are under contract to RKO, from which Arthur Hornblow Jr. borrowed them for Paramount. Mitchell Leisen will direct. Price is open pay by Virginia Van Upp.

• • •

His career sounds almost like the hackneyed plot of a hackneyed musical, but Paramount insists we're going to see and hear lots of Franko Forrest.

We may as well know all about him, because his very first picture will be a co-starring vehicle with Gladys Swarthout.

Franko is not Italian but American. He went to Italy 10 years ago changed his name, became a sensation in opera and now is to play in America with Chicago Opera Company.

• • •

There was a time when the mere suggestion of using an unknown in a leading role would make producers shriek.

"I'm tryin' to ruin me"

The past year has changed things. Never before have so many newcomers been placed in important parts even feature. Now comes James Stuart, Princeton boy, a stranger to movie fans, established in stock and on the stage who gets the important assignment of playing opposite Margaret Sullavan in Ursula Parrott's "NEXT TIME WE LIVE."

Stuart has E. H. Griffith, director, to thank. Ed liked his tests and arranged for Universal to borrow him from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Chatter in Hollywood: I'm using this paragraph to shout: "Surprise! Surprise!" at Joan Arthur. It is Harry Cohn's way of telling Joan that tomorrow, on her birthday, he is making her a Columbia star and she will be given equal billing with Herbert Marshall in "If You Could Only Cook."

SAMUEL GOLDWYN is going to pay Cupid, this time to David Niven and Merle Oberon. Merle arrives in New York November 28. David, who has been yearning for her so sadly, has been given a trip to New York as a reward for his work with Miriam Hopkins and Joel McCrea in "Splendor."

GLITTERING GIRL

By May Christie

CHAPTER XVI

Martina de Bray had told her all about the Prince's antecedents, and what a brave and uncomplaining fight he had put up in this new country, unaccustomed to working as he was, poor chap!

The Prince had twice worn his wonderful military decorations, showing what a hero he had been in the World War, and afterwards with those dreadful Bolsheviks who had wounded him badly. Weak as he was, directly he got out of the hospital, he had driven a taxicab in Paris for almost a year! He wasn't too proud to do menial labor, which of course was the sign of a real gentleman!

He was modest, and as his champion, Mrs. de Bray, remarked, he did not boast "in the American manner." She had hinted the Prince a horn to such a pitch that, for a brief time, Sadie had thought that Martina must herself be in love with the young aristocrat from Russ.a!

But nothing of the sort. Martina had confided in the deepest confidence that Nan's father and she had been "on the verge of a great romance!" before the crash came! But now both must look elsewhere, as neither of them had a penny, unfortunately!

Yet the attractive widow maintained a charming, if small flat on her income—and always dressed in excellent taste.

Sometimes, alone in that bird's eyrie apartment atop the great York Avenue hotel, poor Sadie soon would think the world rather topsy-turvy. There were times—she wouldn't admit this to herself, but it was true—when she wished they hadn't made such a success of the Texas wells, or struck oil on the property, either!

Yearns for Title

Still, one had Vernon to consider. All the spending, and dressing, and parading, and late hours would be worth something, if he got achieved a title!

Jed perhaps Mrs. Tyrone's happiest times in the luxurious tower apartment were when she kicked off her tight shoes, and discarded her fashionable corset, and got into her loose wrapper, and lay on the chaise longue, and her maid brought her a strong cup of tea, and she read the Palookah newspapers.

That good-looking but undesirable young man whom Vernon had "picked up with" on the 'Ma had telephoned more than once—but Sadie congratulated herself that she had not delivered his message.

One day, he actually dared to come and call, uninvited! He said he had been out of town for a week—he wanted to ask Vernon to dinner—

Sadie had "put him in his place," and "My daughter is out with Prince Karinoff of Russia. We are engaged for every evening this week, and next, too," she had grandiosely announced!

Nan had run in almost on the heels of his departure. Sadie had told Nan of his visit, and her cleverness in getting rid of him.

Nan's blue eyes had widened in amusement. "You think that Terry Shannon? Why, don't you know that he's a cad and a bounder? He owed a very much less prominent New York family than Vernon will be will! You keep your feet in it, dear old Auntie!"

• • •

Vernon Tyrone on the fourth morning after her arrival in New York—awoke in her smart bedroom on the thirty-seventh floor of the Hotel Sieraide to a sparkling day.

But Vernon didn't feel particularly happy at awaking. She had dreamed of Terry Shannon. Had lived again through his glowing kisses. Maybe, in her dreams, Terry had told her that he loved her. She had been transported to a wonderful country shot through and through with rosy light. Coming back to reality—everything had faded! Despite the sunshine that flooded her wide room, everything figuratively was drab.

"Do I Love Him,"

"Do I love him or am I just a crazy fool?" she asked herself.

She had dreamed of handsome Terry almost every night since their meeting on the train—since the wonderful perfumed pansy. She had but to close her eyes to feel again his warm kisses on her lips.

And ever since the party, on his part—silence!

To him, then, she was only one of many girls who had "fallen" for his charm and good looks!

"If only I'd never met him! If only I'd kept him at a distance—hadn't let him kiss me!" She sat up in bed, with an impatient gesture brushing the tousled curls back from her forehead.

"Awake, Maggie?" Her mother, plump and fussy in an orchid kimono trimmed with swansdown, thrust her head into the room. "My! but you slept like the dead. I was all in myself—but that wonderful Prince Caeryng-Offia that the way you pronounce it?—certainly showed us a swell time last night!"

"I'm glad you enjoyed it." A gleam of hope sprang into the girl's eyes as she added: "Any letters, Mother?"

"Heaps of them. For both of us. Invitations. Bills. Circulars. Most of the invitations are the kind where we have to pay. They don't seem to be giving away much for nothing in this city. But it is exciting, just the same."

She trotted back into the drawing room and returned with some envelopes addressed to Vernon. The latter tore them open. Wasn't it possible that one would be from Terry Shannon . . . ? Her face fell as she hastily scanned the jazzy missive.

"I'll bring your breakfast on a tray. And our names are in the papers again this morning, Maggie—I mean, Vernon—" There was a note of triumph in Mrs Tyrone's voice.

What good did that do when Terry remained silent? Vernon's heart was heavy with disappointment. But she must not let her mother see or suspect.

Talks of Prince

"I cooked breakfast for your father and myself this morning. I—I—I could those frozen fried whatsit things—I'm going to stick to it before I'm dressed." And Mrs. T. . . . plumped a tray laden with grapefruit and coffee and fizzy sausages and waffles on Vernon's knees, and seated herself on the end of the bed for a talk.

Vernon dreaded these one-sided gossipy chats. In the past week they had all been to one end—Prince Karinoff!

"He's a real gentleman. Nothing pansy about him. He's an aristocrat. . . . She's nuts on him. He's mad about you, Vernon although he's too much of a gentleman to say anything about it. My goodness! Are you the queerest girl! Most any girl in the world would be tickled pink about it!

About what?"

"The prince, of course. You aren't that stupid! Don't you see he's interested in you? Can't you see what the end may be if you play your cards right?"

Sadie Tyrone's bright, shrewd little eyes gleamed like some small creature of the forest as she added: "You aren't going to tell me that you don't care that a man of such position is after you, Maggie? You wouldn't be such a fool as let him slip through your fingers to some other girl?"

Vernon was silent. No use to argue. She finished her grapefruit and attacked a little sausage half-heartedly.

"You're just shamming that you aren't thrilled, dearie! And him so good looking, and so polite, and so blue-blooded, and all! Mrs. de Bray—I'm calling her Martina now—says there isn't a woman of any age on Park Avenue that wouldn't simply jump at him!"

The telephone rang by the bedside. Swift color rose to Vernon's cheeks as she lifted the receiver.

But it wasn't Terry Shannon. It was Nan Rushington. Hope died. Nan wanted her to come over to the apartment and go out to lunch with her somewhere.

"I don't know that I can." But Nan was insistent. She had something very important to discuss with her. "Don't let on to your mother, but the lunch will be a four-some and—someone you like awfully, a cousin."

Vernon's breath caught. Nan was—of course—referring to Terry! It could it be possible that she had fixed this up with Terry Shannon?

Apparently she had. It was a different, an eager Vernon who bathed, and slipped into the beautiful, hand-embroidered underwear of pale pink satin that Mrs de Bray had helped choose for her.

Mrs. de Bray had taken her to the expensive couturiere too who had fashioned him a smart suit of moss-green fabric with its coral sweater, and pert little green hat touched with coral, that were exactly right for a gay morning in Autumn.

Never had Vernon looked prettier or smarter than when she departed, hope high, for Nan Rushington's home.

• • •

"Darling of course I called him up! Didn't your mother tell you he's phoned you several times, and even boarded the lioness in her den—that's poor Aunt Sadie!—to take you out to dinner with him?"

"Good heavens, no!" Vernon's eyes were startled, happy pools. Her breath caught. "Mother never said one word to me about it."

"Because she wants to land Prince Karinoff for you. Didn't I tell you she'd be after him, hook, line and sinker?"

"And you called Terry Shannon up? You have his telephone number?"

"Of course, Precious. I got it the night he drove me home from the Suydams'. I'm no shrinking violet."

"And—you asked him to meet us for lunch today?"

Certainly I did. It was only fair—after Aunt Sadie's snubbing him so." Nan was cold-creaming her face before the mirror. She made a distinct moue as she added, plaintively: "I need you both for an alibi. Dad's given me such a wedding!"

"What alibi? And how can we be an alibi?" asked Vernon.

"It's about my darling Sugar. The cats have been meowing to dad. He says it's absolutely hands-off!"

"Hands off Sugar?"

"Yep! It seems the whole town's talking about Winslow Rushington's fair chee-eld! Lord! How I do hate 'em!"

"Then why on earth do you do it, Nan?" After all, the man is married."

"Oh, be your age. Don't be a prude, I'm wild about Sugar."

"Is he meeting us today?" It suddenly struck Vernon that it wasn't for any philanthropic motive in drawing Terry and herself together that Nan had summoned her for luncheon.

"Of course he is. Dad makes me account for every move now. If I make a kick, the old bear is going to cut off my allowance, he threatens. That's why I sent for you. We're lunching at a new spot called the Goldfish Tavern."

Brown Bombshell

GAMBLING on the spin of fashion's wheel is fascinating. Brown, long consigned to unimaginative, practical clothes, now turns up as one of the safest bets for formal wear. Brown is gorgeous in this new material—a mid cloth in a deep smoky tone akin with silvery glints. Vionnet makes a dinner dress of brown metal cloky featuring a cross-swathed bodice and full skirt. Strikingly successful accessories are a brown silk snood to bind up one's curls, brown silk-on ghillie scandals corded with silver and a short cape of silky sable.

Prisoner of the OGPU

By GEORGE KITCHIN

CHAPTER 27

'But, God forgive, how can I work in the state I'm in? I have no strength and am about to drop."

He was very excited and was wiping the perspiration from his forehead with his hand, leaving a dirty mark.

We turned left and came alongside the Pskov road.

The gates were opened and we drove into the yard. It was surrounded by a high barbed-wire fence and had two watch-turrets. A sentry-box with a soldier on duty stood at the gate.

At the right side of the yard were two large barracks, at the left, several detached buildings in the center, between them, two small one-story houses. All the buildings were newly-built of green timber.

Next to the sentry-box was a shed for horses with sails made of fir tree branches.

Suddenly the yard became animated.

Men were coming from all the doors, running past us and looking us over. One, a man of medium height, dressed in a short coat, came out of one of the center buildings and walked toward us.

He was accompanied by a man in a military great-coat.

Zakharianta took off his thick lips and looked at them without budging from his place. His lobster eyes, protruding from his thick glasses with an unfriendly expression.

The man in the short coat was not in the least abashed by this attitude and welcomed him in the most cordial manner.

The doctor and I took off our sergeant coats and joined the group. We introduced ourselves and Mr. Aronovich, commandant of the base, and his assistant Sergeyev, chief of the guards.

Aronovich was the very embodiment of friendliness. His fat cheeks constantly spread in an artificial smile, his thick lips bared a row of strong yellow teeth.

"Please step in and have a bit of tea. It will warm you up after this long trip. You are welcome to all we have to offer," he invited Zakharianta obsequiously.

The chief of the guards was not as hard-boiled and could not quite hide his embarrassment.

Zakharianta remained morose all during tea and questioned Aronovich as to the conditions at his base. The latter remained unabashed.

"Everything is in excellent order, comrade commander, as I shall presently have the pleasure to report to you. But do have some jam, or would you like to have something more substantial for breakfast? You must be hungry after the long trip."

The tea was served by a pretty young woman prisoner dressed in a padded short jacket, a dark wooden skirt, and coarse felt boots. She wore a kerchief around her head and several little ringlets of curly blond hair hung over her forehead.

Her attractive, full lips were opened in a coy, arch smile. Her manner was rather free and familiar and her eyes revealed a certain masked insolence.

"What are you convicted of?" Zakharianta asked her.

"I am from Rostov, and they got me in the regular clean-up," she boldly replied. This meant that she was either a prostitute or a thief.

"What do you do now?" continued Zakharianta.

"Oh, I am now the comrade commander's maid," she replied saucily.

Health

Daily Bathing Maintains Health

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

IT APPEARS that the new health establishment in Saratoga Springs, New York, has already acquired popularity and bids fair to be a great success.

I am glad that there is a definite move to establish more of these watering places.

The value of such baths as a means of cure in certain ailments has been known for many years. It is hoped that within a short time they will be available to everyone here, as they have been in Europe for hundreds of years.

The daily bath is necessary for health. Everybody knows that, yet less than a century ago bathing the whole body at one time was considered absolutely vile. Warm bathtubs were first introduced in this country they were looked upon as a decrepit institution. It was considered as so risky a thing that one had to get the doctor's permission to take a bath.

ONCE WAS LUXURY

Originally the bathtub was an expensive item, and to have one was regarded as a great luxury. It was found only in the home of the rich. Today, the bathtub is within the reach of everyone and its possession is no longer a mark of social distinction. Yet despite this, it is amazing to learn the number of persons in many sections of the country who fail to utilize the bathtub.

The value of the daily bath for persons of all ages cannot be overstated. We cannot say too much for the many health-giving qualities of this practice. In addition to cleansing the skin and removing accumulated dirt, the bath washes out the pores of the skin.

The sweat glands open into these pores. The secretions of these glands help to carry away waste materials of the body. These are really poisonous substances which are sometimes referred to as "toxins." Wastes are also excreted through the lungs in the expired air, and through the kidneys in the urine. Daily bathing cleanses the skin and helps rid the body of these substances, lessening the work of the lungs, heart and kidneys.

RELAXING EFFECT

Another important effect of the daily bath is its relaxing action. A tired nerves. It refreshes the body and promotes thorough relaxation and rest. Nothing is more soothing than a lukewarm tub after a busy day.

I know of many persons who have rid themselves of insomnia, the inability to sleep, by the simple practice of taking a warm bath just before retiring. For this purpose, do not have the water hot but merely lukewarm. A warm drink after the bath is an additional aid in overcoming sleeplessness.

AVOID EXTREMES

Bear in mind that warm water is relaxing and cold water is stimulating. As a rule cold baths or showers are taken upon arising in the morning. In no instance, however, is it advisable to take baths of a very high or very low temperature unless instructed to do so by the physician. The above ranges of temperature are used in the treatment of certain disorders, at a health spa or watering place where adequate facilities are available.

A clean body is essential to good health. From early infancy the child should be directed toward the habit of the daily bath. It should be regarded as the regular thing and not an "event." Personal cleanliness will do much to prevent the spread of germs and disease and will aid the body in maintaining good health.

Announcing DELAYED WEDDING Reception

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to be married in a month or so with only our relatives present. However, a reception is to be given for us later in the week. What would be the proper way to state an announcement of our marriage, and invite friends to the reception at the same time?

H.

You don't say who is giving the reception, but the one who is giving it should write the invitations. Let's say your mother and father are the hosts. Then your mother might write notes worded something like this:

Dear Jane:

Mary and John were, as you know, married last week, with only the relatives present at the ceremony. With their plans at the time it wasn't possible to have a reception after the ceremony, and so George and I would like to have a little party for them on Friday, the fifteenth of October, at our home. We want very much to have you and Alfred come—do say "yes." We'll be looking for you both at about nine o'clock, and the newlyweds will be delighted to have you with us for this happy occasion.

Dearest love to you both.

Affectionately,

When Younger Set Goes Formal

By ANNICE BRINK

ITS GROWN-UP AIR will enchant the girl who has just reached the age when a full-length evening gown is permissible—yet it is properly reticent as to sleeve and neck lines, and will thus win the maternal parent's approbation. That's the story of the picturesque evening frock (left) which we found in a shop devoted to clothes for girls in their 'teens. It is of a mauve-grey moire taffeta, very slim through the middle but very bouffant and flared at top and bottom. Magenta taffeta flowers are at the undefined waistline. So very inexpensive that it's no wonder the elders who can be fitted there are invading this 'teen shop. For details, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her.

MADGE STANDS READY FOR CALL

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 475

I STARED AT Katherine Bickett's troubled face with the amazement which comes from the complete upsetting of one's ideas.

I had believed her to be in blissful ignorance of Harriet Braithwaite's feeling toward her, and here, in her reception of Dr. Braithwaite's summons to her, she appeared fully cognizant of the older woman's jealousy.

"What—what do you mean?" I parried banally, "about Harriet feeling as she does? I thought you were sincere friends"

"We are," Katherine replied promptly. "And there isn't a thing personal in Mrs. Braithwaite's feeling. I am sure of that. It would be the same to her if any other nurse were brought in to supersede her. She is intensely jealous of her prerogatives as her husband's assistant, although, to do her justice, she tries so hard to hide it that her husband does not suspect her feeling. But one woman can't fool another one, you know."

But one woman had, I said to myself, with a sudden access of prideful sympathy for my sister-in-law. She had permitted Katherine to see a professional jealousy which, I knew, was practically nonexistent, while carefully hiding the obsession that her husband had adored Katherine secretly for years.

It was not for me to destroy that carefully built up structure by word or look, I told myself. Rather, it was my place to bolster it with an opinion, however spurious, of my own.

"I'm sorry to hear that," I said, "and I hope you're mistaken, although I've noticed one or two trifles that would appear to confirm your belief. But my opinion is immaterial. The facts are these. You can't get out of it without a flat refusal of Dr Braithwaite's authority—and he wants you for the leading place, I am sure. Now, just one thing more, and I'll let you go."

"Well?" she said as I hesitated, and the expression on her face was that of one who faces additional trouble.

"Does Hugh need two people in that room to take care of him?"

I asked. "Couldn't Lillian stay in there, and I remain close by, so that she could call me, if necessary?"

"Hugh only needs constant watching now," she said. "Lillian will be perfectly able to do it alone. But—you ought to keep within call, and that if she needed help you could go in and give it to her."

DICKY ARRIVES

"I'll stay in my study," I told her promptly. "You can't hear voices in there, but if she knocks on the wall I can hear her and come over."

"Good!" Katherine commented. "And I suppose I would better get going. Dr. Braithwaite is in a hurry, isn't he?"

"Yes. He said he wanted you up there as soon as possible."

"I'll just go back and tell Lillian what to be done for Hugh," she said, "and then I'll beat it upstairs. I'm to tell Lillian you are in the study, and that she is to knock on the wall if she needs you?"

"Yes, but—" I hesitated miserably—"please don't." I halted again, and again Katherine shot a quick, comprehending glance at me.

"Nobody else save Lillian shall hear me say this," she assured me. "So long!"

With a wave of her hand she was hurrying back to the library door. I did not want to see her enter it, but hurried, in turn, to my study, where my interview with Edwin Braithwaite had been interrupted by the news of Lee Chow's danger.

What was Edwin Braithwaite about to tell me when our interview was interrupted? I wondered.

But I was to have no opportunity for extended thought upon that problem. I had scarcely marshaled all the facts I had in my possession when my husband's knock sounded upon the door, and the next instant, hardly waiting for my "come in" he was in the room demanding, suspiciously and loudly, "Well! What's the big idea?"

Fur Vests Are New

THE FUR VEST, of black galyak, is seen with some of the season's newest suits. It's effective with suits in the new renaissance tones of wine and green, with matching black accessories.

And if you want to do the thing up brown, you may have a matching muff of galyak.

Small fur ascots, styled to match the fur turbans and muffs of the season, are seen about town, worn with the new fall suits or untrimmed coats.

And one of the neatest tricks of the season is the velvet scarf trimmed with mink tails.

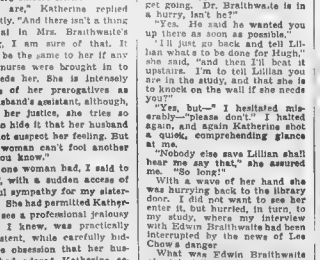
BRIDGE

Useless Trumps

By MRS. CULBERTSON

There is perhaps nothing more annoying to a Bridge player than holding five trumps against opponents who have only four in either hand and still being unable to win a trump trick.

This was West's plight in the deal shown below:



North chose the forcing three-spade response in preference to the more illuminating two-club bid because, despite his strong hand and the fact that partner had opened the bidding, it was not entirely unlikely East-West could make game at hearts.

The three-spade bid made it necessary for the opponents to mention their heart suit at four. East accordingly bid his only bid four hearts, but when South doubled North could not afford to leave it in and chose rather to contract for the spade game.

West recognized the hand was probably a distributional freak and refrained from doubling, despite his five trumps, although he did entertain high hopes of defeating the contract.

With North plainly marked as extremely short if not void in hearts, West made the brilliant opening of a low diamond, which East won with the Ace. East returned a diamond and took the Jack and King before leading a heart. Declarer won this lead with the Ace and led a low spade, which was won by dummy's Queen. When East failed to follow, it was discovered that it did not cause declarer to give up hope. The Ace and King of clubs were played and when the Queen dropped, a heart was discarded on the Jack.

The last low club was trumped with the spade nine and the last five tricks won with a cross-ruff of high trumps, which, to North's to his annoyance, compelled to underruff every time.

Having been doubled at four hearts, East could gladly have ventured to save at five.

Even if he had, it would have cost his side 400 points, as the play of three rounds of clubs would have compelled East either to ruff with a low spade, a heart honors or be overruffed by South's nine Whichever he did, South must win two heart tricks in addition to North's two tricks in clubs.

The Black Chameleon

THE BLACK DRESS remains one of woman's most able and dramatic allies. The "chameleon" frock of black crepe, a simple sheath with standing collar slit in front, dolman sleeves and slim gored skirt, is completely transformed by artfully chosen accessories. A three-strand pearl necklace fastened about the collar creates a luncheon dress, tailored white linen collar and cuffs make an office dress, while a cord girdle and lace ruff are Renaissance in feeling. For the perfect town costume the dress is worn with a black galyac cape, matching fur hat, and black kidskin envy bag and gloves all trimmed with bands of perforated suede.

The Serene Confidence of the 8th WOMAN

She is likely that eighth woman who relies on Midol. Eight million women once suffered regularly every month. Had difficult days when they must save themselves, and fever themselves, or pay the penalty. But a million have accepted the relief of Midol.

Are you compelled to favor yourself, and save yourself, certain days of every month? Midol could change this. Might have you out dancing. And even if it didn't keep you absolutely free from all pain for the entire period, you would receive a measure of relief well worth while!

Midol is effective even when the pain has caught you unaware and has reached its height. It's effective for hours, so two tablets should see you through your worst day. They do not contain any narcotic.

This boon to women is found in any drugstore—usually right out on the toilet goods counter. Or drop a card to Midol, 470 Varick St., New York, and get a free trial box postpaid, plainly wrapped.

HOW many readers are regular martyrs to pain, month after month, envious of those women who go serenely through their time? You probably know at least one woman who is never at a disadvantage, never breaks engagements, never declines dances (unless she wants to!) and who spirits never seem to droop.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Why Are So Many Pretty Spinsters Left Unwed?

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

BETTY has been out of college for two years. She has a job in a real estate office. She is good-looking, dresses well—and wonders why she has never had a proposal.

But part of Betty's letter puts the case to a gnat's heel, and here it is:

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"The other day I was looking over an old family album and the plain, downright ugliness of my aunt, great-aunts and cousins twice removed, gave me a terrific shock. This grim sisterhood either scowled or simpered when their pictures were taken. Not one beat. Their ruches under the chin and the fuzzy-wuzzy doorpost whiskers did their best to give ugly to have all men to courtesy.

"Yet all of these old girls got husbands, and good providers, too. Why was it? I can mobilize an army of boy friends who will take me to dinner shows and dances, wear out the living-room chairs sitting, make love in the most approved movie style. But —as for proposing, never!

"Why is it that all the ugly girls of preceding generations could get husbands while we, who are better-looking, more healthy, more intelligent, and who are just as feminine and maternal in our instincts, can't"

"Every time I see a baby in its carriage, I can hardly keep back the tears! I love children so deeply. And yet I suppose I always will be "A SPINSTER."

The chief reason why men do not marry as early and as often as they used to is money. A wife has become a luxury. As a clergyman said to me the other day, "Marriage seems to be an institution for the extreme poor or the ultra-rich; the intermediate class can't afford it."

A HAZARD

When a man is making a bare living for himself it gives him a real case of qualms to think of supporting a wife, and very probably children. If a girl has a job she is apt to keep it for two or three years until something in the way of a prospect is put by, and even in a life given to take, her pay envelope is filled back on and a girl knows next to nothing about thrifty housekeeping, marriage is distinctly a hazard.

The above is the dark side of the picture, because millions and millions of people do marry and somehow or other manage to get by. And millions and millions will continue to marry, no matter what the economic condition of the country happens to be.

MECHANICAL CARE

But to answer my correspondent's letter literally, one of the greatest boons to the modern girl is to consider if not the blonde or brunette sheen, but electricity! A man can push a button, get his clothes washed and pressed, have his morning breakfast supplied, go to a restaurant and order his dinner, and all said and done, he would rather have a car than maintain a wife.

This is not true of extreme youth, the natural mating time of life, when the urge toward marriage is strongest. But as a man grows older, especially if he has had several disappointments, he adjusts himself to a life of single blessedness or cussedness, as you will. He is harder to please as he grows less pleasing.

Another thing that keeps him single is the present day freedom among the sexes. When the holes in the family album were going the price of "paying attention" to them was a wedding ring and men paid it. There is no such obligation in this the

A "Lovely" Landscape

By Nell Brinkley

The kind that Cupid approves of: Given the smiling hills, colored with the yellow and red of autumn flowers; the hoary trees with their turning leaves and their dappling of shadow on sunny grass; gray stone fences winding as in picture books across the climbing fields; gorgeous sky of mosaic, Italian blue; a blue lake imitating the sky; the ribbon of a road going past little red-roofed houses; given all this setting, Cupid likes it better if it be adorned with pairs of lovers. Hollywood Enchantment

By ARLINE GOULD

WHY SHOULD any woman have to worry about allure these days when Hollywood has so much magic to offer?

Outlining the lips with a red makeup pencil is the very newest Hollywood trick—and certainly one of the most glamorous.

It can be used either with or without a lipstick, so don't get the idea that lipsticks have gone into retirement. They haven't—they are still ace high.

However, this makeup pencil is fascinating business. It not only gives the mouth a firm, delicate outline, but does away with that affected "prunes and prisms" look that is especially bad in profile.

After outlining the mouth with this pencil, the lips are filled in with indelible, moist rouge painted on with a long camel's hair brush.

The rouge must be painted on smoothly and evenly, with particular care that the color is carried quite far inside the mouth. This process gives the lips a moist, lustrous look and prevents the possibility of smearing at the edges, a danger often encountered when regular lipstick is used.

To learn the name of these new makeup pencils which give the lips a firm delicate outline, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000 or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

Question—Is constant application to the hair injurious? My husband takes a daily shower and at the same time shampoos his hair. Recently his hair has got very thin and is beginning to recede at the temples. Do you think it is because the water has dried up the natural oils? I told him I thought he should use a hair tonic instead of water when he brushes it, but he said he finds that tonics or pomades are too greasy.

Mrs. Florence P., Chelsea.

Answer—Among scalp specialists there is a difference of opinion concerning the frequent use of water on the hair. Some say it removes too much of the natural oils, and causes the hair to become brittle. Others affirm it has no more bad effects upon the hair than upon the skin. Chances are that a weekly shampoo does no harm, but that a daily one is bad. There is a transparent, waterproof hood on the market that protects the hair while under the shower. It covers the entire head and face so that you can step out of the bath as fresh as when you stepped in. Women use it because it keeps their hair dry and also in place. It also keeps their make-up fresh. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the name of this hood and also for an excellent, non-greasy stimulus tonic which replenishes natural oils to the scalp and insures a well groomed look.

Question—Is it true that you have a set of reducing exercises which were created particularly for Mae West? A friend of mine told me that you sent them to her last summer. If it isn't too late I would appreciate your sending these exercises to me.

Dorothy C., Cambridge.

Answer—Yes, these exercises were designed by Jim Davies, known as the "figure-moulder" of the West Coast studios. They were invented by Mr. Davies especially for Mae and her favorite reducing exercise. They are very simple to follow and hence are invaluable to beginners who do not want to spend a lot of time or energy in exercising. One of the exercises is to reduce the abdomen—the other to slenderize the hips. I will be glad to send them to you or to anyone else who will forward a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass.

FOODCASTS

by Pearl V. Metzelthin

Do you know the Golden Rule for soups? Heavy soups for light meals and light soups for heavy meals.

Don't forget that milk loses none of its nutritive values even when it sours, and there are many excellent cooking uses for sour milk.

Left-over vegetables can really be a blessing in disguise. It's no trick at all to turn them into an interesting purée by mashing the cooked vegetables through a strainer and thickening, if too thin, with crumbled Krispy Crackers.

You can easily make your dinners as dramatic as a three-act play! The first act (appetizers) should arouse interest . . . the second act (soup) should intensify the curiosity . . . and the climax comes in the third act (main course). Dessert is the epilogue. But don't fail to have Krispy Crackers usher you to your seat!

"I say it's spinach and I like it" will be the new version of the spinach joke, if you serve this delicious loaf:

SPINACH LOAF

1½ pounds raw spinach
¼ teaspoon salt ¼ teaspoon pepper
2½ teaspoons lemon juice
18 Sunshine Krispy Crackers, rolled fine
1 egg 1 tablespoon butter
½ pound mushrooms, cut small or chopped
¼ cup grated cheese (may be omitted)
¼ cup buttered Krispy Cracker crumbs

Wash spinach thoroughly. Cook slowly without water 15 minutes. Use all liquid and season with salt, pepper and lemon juice. Add Krispy Cracker crumbs beaten egg and mushrooms which have been sauted in butter for five minutes. Mix together and fill into greased loaf pan. Sprinkle with grated cheese and top with crumbled Krispy Crackers which have been buttered. Bake in moderate oven (375° F.) for 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Bustles Are Back

WE'VE SEEN timid attempts, in the last few years, to revive the bustle of grandmother's day. But this season there is no doubt about it—the bustle has arrived.

It's all in line with the new tendency to back fullness in the swish evening gowns of the fall season.

Sometimes the bustle takes the form of a looped back drapery, with a trailing panel.

Sometimes it is a peplum-like bit of scarring.

Sometimes it's part of a sash that ties at back, or a flange that stands from the center seam.

But a bustle it is and there's no argument about it.

The new idea of back fullness has given the designers a lot of new ideas in silhouette.

Usually the front of the evening gown is slim, straight and fitted, with the fullness concentrated at the back, where the gown flares forth in surprising fashion.

These flavorful, extra flaky crackers will make your favorite soup taste much better!

Want to make your favorite soup taste "extra special" this evening? . . . Then serve it with Sunshine Krispy Crackers! These dainty, slightly salted squares have a delicate wheaty flavor that brings out the flavor of soup. That's why Krispy Crackers make soup taste much better!

A SERVING FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY COSTS ONLY 2¢

"The Krispy package certainly holds a lot of crackers!"...That's a comment heard in many an economy-minded household these days.

Sunshine Krispy Crackers are baked lighter and flakier. That's why the big pound package holds so many crackers . . . about 125!

BUSINESS

Holding WELL IN Boston

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

Business in the Boston trade area, while not going ahead as fast as it did in September, is still making encouraging progress.

Principal industrial lines—wool and cotton textiles and leather manufacture—show improvement, according to Dun & Bradstreet's report. Retail trade is holding well and the sharp gain of September and October promises to put the year for the first ten months up even with, if not ahead of, the corresponding 1934 period. Construction continues the laggard in recovery nereabouts, and hopes of a good pickup have been largely deferred until the spring of 1936.

• • •

Yesterday we had the pleasure of a personal chat with Arthur H. Wood, president of the Sun Life Insurance Co. . . . a fine gentleman in the affairs in the Boston and New England area viewed . . . business as it is now . . . with the country at large, and the sound character of general conditions in this area is testified to by the statement that the average policy written here was larger than elsewhere. For comparative purposes the figures are about $4100 for Boston and $2800 in other territories . . .

• • •

Notebook: Some of the big stocks—high flyers of late—appear to have run into rather solid resistance . . . Number among these Case, Chrysler and General Motors . . . Among the lower priced issues Murray Body seems to have had enough for the present . . . One of the bigger Boston traders is said to have been slightly scorched on the short side . . . After having made that switch from successful bear to successful bull . . . Well, when you play for big stakes there are big profits and big losses.

• • •

The market is not acting any too well. War news and domestic news for the reasons suggested. We want to see a good recovery on, or near the funnies from we have reported to the bull camp . . . no glimmering. The lows set over the last week are minor danger points. We are inclined to carry stop loss orders a point lower down. So much for protection. On any rally, and we feel the list can, if given half a chance by the news, we suggest permanent closing out of positions in recent fast moving issues.

• • •

Short Topics: The specialties in our Boston list which we mention are not wanted if they break the levels suggested for protecting stops . . . In the event of a rally their conservative moves to date encourage the belief something better than recent highs is possible . . . This we think particularly true of Libbey-Owens-Ford, Gliddden and Ortanese . . . The alcohol stocks represent another solid group, along with the store stocks, that remain under our heading of specialties.

FLOYD GIBBONS

GORDON SCOTT of Cambridge wasn't quite sure that his etching of the world traveler would get by the engravers, but they rose to the occasion and we take pleasure in reproducing Gordon's contribution herewith. The technique is interesting, don't you think so, folks?

Our compliments on your work, Artist Scott!

And, boys and girls, once again we must remind you pencil sketches can seldom be reproduced on newspaper stock, and for that reason many contributions must be rejected, we are sorry to say. India ink is best for the purpose, and strong, white paper or cardboard.—The Editor.

The Wheel of Fate

Paul Pacelli Lies on the Ground Watching Death Rain on Him From Above

By FLOYD GIBBONS

Publication of your story may be delayed a bit while Floyd is in the war zone, because of the time it takes his mail to reach him. Floyd asks all his adventurers to "be patient with a hard workin' feller."

HELLO, EVERYBODY!

Well, sir, people are coming long distances to join this Adventurers' Club of ours. Here's Paul Pacelli of 1013 Barrett street, Schenectady, N. Y., that thriving and unpronounceable city in the Mohawk Valley, where I used to go every week or two to take a science lesson.

Luckily for Paul, I know how to spell Schenectady. Otherwise, I'm afraid I'd have stuck his yarn in a pigeonhole somewhere, and looked for another one that wouldn't have been so hard on my orthography. Then, boys and girls, you would have missed one very swell yarn—the story of an adventure Paul rode into on the old Scotia Bridge across the Mohawk River.

You know, I have been saying that whereas the adventurer of olden times rode to his thrills on horseback, people today are more apt to be carried to their adventures in an eight-cylinder buzz wagon. Paul's story comes somewhere in between the old and the new. He rode out to meet the most hair-raising experience of his life—on a bicycle.

It wasn't even Paul's bicycle. Here's what happened. On a bright, sunshiny afternoon in the month of June, 1921, Paul and his bosom pal, Pat Buonfiglio, were loafing in the shade of a tree and arguing, as young boys will argue, about the advisability of going swimming. Pat was in favor of going swimming and Paul was against it.

Pat thought that nothing would feel better on a hot day than to have a nice cool dip at a more or less deserted spot on the other side of the river. Paul, on the other hand, felt that the best way to keep cool was to lie still. Swim or no swim, he wasn't going to take a long walk on a day when the thermometer was reading 98 in the shade. He told Pat his views on the subject, but Pat was inclined not to agree with him.

Well, the thing was finally adjusted to everybody's satisfaction. Pat started off to go swimming, leaving Paul to lie in the shade and keep cool. But Pat hadn't been gone very long before Paul began to get lonesome, and to wish that he had gone swimming, too.

And just about that time Buck Milmore came rolling down the street on a bicycle. Buck had to go home and practice his violin lesson, and that was Paul's chance. It was a hot day to be taking a long walk, but on a bike he could get to the swimming hole in no time—probably catch up with Pat Buonfiglio on the way. Paul borrowed Buck's bicycle and was off down the street at a lively clip.

He headed straight for the Mohawk River, increasing his speed as he went. By the time he got to the old Scotia Bridge he was pushing that old bike along as fast as his legs could turn the pedals. He rolled onto the bridge, still moving at top speed, and then—things began to get complicated.

There was a lot of slow-moving traffic on that bridge. Two horse-drawn vehicles were crossing it at the same time, going in opposite directions. On the right-hand side, dead ahead of Paul's fast-moving bicycle, was a team of heavy draft horses pulling a flat wagon on which rested a large tree trunk. And on the left-hand side of the road, coming toward Paul, was another team of horses pulling a load of hay.

There were two things Paul could do in a case like that. He could pull up behind the first wagon and wait for the other one to pass, or he could put on speed and try to get past the flat wagon before the hay wagon drew abreast of it and blocked the bridge. And Paul, like all good adventurers do at least once in their lives, did a dum job of picking. He leaned a little harder on the pedals and took the latter course—tried to get around the flat wagon before the hay wagon got to it. Then the fun broke!

Paul was almost on top of the log wagons when he realized that he couldn't make it. Too late, he back-pedaled, trying to bring the bicycle to a stop. But by pedaling it went any use. He crashed glancingly into one of the horses of the flat wagon, just as the horses of the hay wagon came up and blocked the way. Then the wheels of his bicycle slid out from under him and he was falling toward the ground.

After that things happened so fast that Paul couldn't keep count of them. "I made a grab for part of the harness," he says, "as the horse I had hit reared into the air. I missed, slid down the horse's hind leg, and struck the ground with my head and shoulders between the horse's hind hoofs and a large iron-rimmed front wheel. And the lower part of my body, still straddling the bicycle, lay under the hoofs of the other team of horses. Right there I had a feeling that I was done for.

"The four horses, thoroughly frightened, were dancing and prancing about, pulling at the traces and tossing into the air. The teamsters were shouting and I could see panic stricken as the horses, and I was the most part oblivious of the lot. I lay like a log, frozen to immobility. I could not move even so much as an eyelash. And maybe it's a good thing I couldn't.

"As I looked up from where I lay, I could see a paper-ed teamster frantically wrenching at the reins. I saw to keep that iron-rimmed wheel, poised against my chest, from running over me. Iron-shod hoofs were flying all about my head, threatening to crush it.

"Those hoofs were crashing to the pavement so close to my ear that each time it sounded as though a shotgun were being fired. Not once, but a dozen times did I see those hoofs rise and fall beside my head. Then, after what seemed ten years, the horses were quieted down and a teamster ran to me, rubbing his eyes and exclaiming, "Good Lord, kid, aren't you hurt somewhere?" But I wasn't.

Believe it or not, boys and girls, the only casualty of that adventure was a badly busted bicycle. Well—this ten bucks I'm mailing out to Paul up there in Schenectady will go a long way toward buying a new bicycle. And if you, Johnny, want a sawbuck to buy a bike with—well—send in your adventure story. Tomorrow I'll give you a new thriller. It's "Courage of Terror."

STATE TO LOSE 11 OF LOCAL CCC CAMPS

Massachusetts is to lose 11 of its CCC camps instead of 30, according to information received today from Washington.

In answer to protests from Acting Governor Joseph L. Hurley, Herbert Emmerich, acting assistant of the National Park Service, sent a reply saying that a reduction of 10,000 in authorized CCC strength necessitated eliminating 400 camps and a reduction of four in the 15 Massachusetts camps under his division would be "relatively fractionally a little better than other states."

Another telegram from C. M. Granger, acting chief of the Forest Service, said that the cut in the CFC camps under this agency leaves the state slightly better off proportionally than the other states.

Commissioner of Conservation Samuel A. York, who shown the message, expressed surprise at the decision to cut four camps from the Massachusetts list under the National Park Service. He said his understanding was that the state would lose but three of these camps and seven under the forest service.

If a fourth is to be eliminated, he said, it will probably mean the one at Windsor.

With 11,000 slogans to go through, the judges of the Sears-Roebuck contest are working day and night to have their decision ready to announce in the Boston Sunday Advertiser on October 20. Shown here are Daniel Bloomfield, Chamber of Commerce, Professor Charles E. Bellatty, professor of advertising of Boston University, and Dr. Charles E. Mackey, chairman of the Boston school committee. Standing is William F. Nugent, advertising manager of Sears Roebuck's.

SEARS JUDGES 11,000 SLOGANS

The judges of the Sears Roebuck Christmas slogan contest are having a busy time of it.

Eleven thousand slogans had been received by the closing hour of the contest. And it seems 10,-999 of these slogans were clever ones because the judges were having a hard time to choose the best.

Dr. Charles E. Mackey, chairman of the Boston school committee, Daniel Bloomfield, Chamber of Commerce, and Professor Charles E. Ballatty, professor of advertising at Boston University, acted as judges.

Ninety-nine prizes are to be given out. The grand prize is a 10-day West Indies cruise, for two persons, all expenses paid.

Announcement of the winners is to be made Sunday in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Watch for it.

Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests, nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

During the past few months "The Trouble Fixer" has been aiding residents of greater Boston and the outlying districts in adjusting complaints of a public nature.

"The Trouble Fixer" is happy in knowing that he has accomplished some good in the communities.

Many of the requests, complaints, and suggestions sent in by readers of the Boston American have been adjusted to satisfaction of all concerned; some of the cases were purely personal or private and could not be handled; some were of such a nature that "The Trouble Fixer" necessarily was unable to deal with them.

Through the co-operation of the various administrative department of Boston and other cities, much has been accomplished. Streets have been cleaned and repaired; sidewalks fixed up and built; street signs and traffic signs placed; night noises silenced; water pipe laid out.

This work is to continue.

Send your complaint, suggestion or request to "The Trouble Fixer." Do not get impatient if he does not give you immediate action. It takes time to investigate and act but The Trouble Fixer can cut the red tape.

Today and every day you will find excellent used cars in the Automobile-For-Sale columns of the American and Advertiser.

AUSTEN LAKE

B. C.'s New Mascot:
Memorial to
The Dog Itchy-Pants

Austen Lake

I AM SKEPTICAL OF B. C.'s new football mascot, the sour-pussed bulldog named Danno.

Mascotting is a divine calling, and you don't just go out and hire a pooch with more wrinkles than a baby's stomach, a leaky eye and a limber pink tongue and say, "Hey you, Danno, turn on your stuff."

Me, I wouldn't give a copper clacker for your patent-leather mascots which are drafted into service.

I will name you one that was born to the profession, a mustard colored, flea-eaten mutt of mixed parentage which fell in the file-closers one June day in 1918, when Co. B, 304th Tanks, were route-marching north of Langres, France.

He was a dingy, matted tyke with a ripple of ribs and a corkscrew tail which fetched step beside an angular Georgia corporal named Slim Dwyer.

Slim was one of those hard-shell mountain types with a pesky temper and a vicious thirst for the canteen of cognac that always swung from his belt. An untidy type who was shunned by the better society of B Company and forced to do his drinking privately in the filthy buvets of the town.

I mean he was an abandoned, unruly outlaw, even in the doubtful fellowship of the outfit, and a frequent boarder in the brig.

* * *

Sergeant Itchy Pants

WELL, SLIM RESENTED being adopted by the pup, which we christened Itchy-pants for its habit of frisking its stern for fleas, and he took a malicious pleasure in squirting dribs of tobacco on the mutt, which accepted the target-practice in good part with a brisk flirt of its tail.

But I noticed, when the company fell out beside the rolling kitchens toward noon, that Slim slyly shared his messkit of slum and saw-dust bread with the little dog, sneering soft profanities.

Slim's one pet hate in the outfit was a thick-shouldered private named Tommy Barry, a Maine woodsman, who, in civil life, was used to swinging his hobnails and fists in cookshack brawls.

It was a stirring sight to watch the two strip off bits of their personal bark, hacking one another into unsightly hulks.

Between times, Slim and Tommy blistered each other with insults in the ranks. So that Tommy, who was a cheery brute with a bashed-in, button-nose and a great gaping grin, would rehearse his quips with his billet-mates before turning them loose on Slim.

Some of his sayings hit like the lash of a bull whip, masterly bits of rhetoric that set the files into hoarse, gleeful roars and brought the shavetails hollering, "Quiet in the ranks."

* * *

Itchy Signs for "Duration"

GRADUALLY, ITCHY-PANTS came to absorb Slim's starved affections and Slim would spend some of his liquor money for snacks of rabbit meat. And once he drew a week on the rock-pile for snatching a hen from a French farmer's roost to give Itchy a change of diet.

But if the outfit disliked its master, it doted on Itchy. And I suspect the little pooch saved our sanity during the long grind of training in the sticky slime behind the lines.

Finally, the company clerk wrote a non-com's warrant which read, "Whereas, by authority of Congress, the dog known as itchy-pants shall hold the rank of sergeant, with disciplinary authority over inferior grades."

It was a sly slap at Slim, who was thus outranked by his dog But for the first time Slim cracked his sun-bitten pan in a crooked smile, and he tied a pair of cast-off sergeant's stripes about Itchy's neck with a shoe string.

* * *

Sergeant Itchy-Pants

THINGS WENT ALONG this way until one July night when the battalion loaded its gear and tanks on trucks and rolled off toward the Argonne. Secretly Slim, who had a gunner's rating, fixed a comfortable berth for Itchy on the driver's cushion.

As the tanks moved into their camouflage under cover of the American batteries, the night was filled with the sound of swishing scythes and the shattering blast of drum-fire. By the night flares, we could see Slim wrapping the whimpering Itchy in his shelter-half while swigging from a big black bottle.

Our zero-hour came next morning just before dawn, and we rolled over in echelons, losing our formations in the ground mists and morning vapor and unknowing that Slim was slung in his turret-strap with the mutt between his knees.

It was tough going across the shell-pitted terrain, with the cartridge racks jabbing our ribs and the breach of the "37" banging our helmets. There was brisk action, too, with one of the caterpillars bogging in a sink hole and lurching slowly under water.

Another, carrying a cask of gasoline strapped to its mud-rail, became a horrible torch with a pillar of flame that climbed toward the sky. And a third lost its turret in a blinding flash, leaving a ragged tangle of steel and the left tread warped overhead like a spine.

* * *

Requiem by the Roadside

PLAINLY IT WAS NOT our dish and, after a bit, we slewed around, leaving shattered wrecks spotted about the plain. There were fountains of black soil kicking up, bursts of bilious-green shell gas, the whispering whine of rotating bands, and the firecracker sputter of machine guns.

It was then we noticed Itchy dragging through the pitted muck, a crimson splash across his hind quarters and part of his corkscrew tail gone. And the man who ran crouching and skidding to meet him was Tommy Barry.

Only as Tommy came sliding near, Itchy wheeled and started yipping back to the spouting hell. Tommy, sensing the meaning, went slithering past toward the gully where most of our hulks were left.

Somehow he found Slim, or what was left of him, and packed him back on his shoulders, still breathing but sinking fast. He died on the way to a field station. So did Itchy. And we gave them both a soldier's burial, wrapped in the same canvas and marking the spot with the same stake.

So, I say, you don't just go out and hire a mascot for its leaky eye and its limber pink tongue. Because the business of mascotting is a divine calling, not to be bought at a sordid price. Me, I would not give a copper clacker for your patent leather mascots that are drafted into service.

Itchy's is a calling from the heart

Harvard Plans Air Attack on Army

By Win Brooks

Never defeated on the plains above the Hudson, Harvard entrained today for West Point, N. Y., and tomorrow's game with Army in Michie Stadium.

The dope schedules the Crimson for another licking. The dope might be wrong.

It will be fight against power, as it was last Saturday, and anything may happen, especially if Harvard's pass defense and kicking stand up under the Army enfilading fire.

Had last week been a soft spot in the Crimson schedule, the team would have come up for the Army contest with better than the underdog's slim chance of keeping its West Point invasion record lily-white.

Undeniably, the team was softened up by the bruising battle with Holy Cross.

ADLIS PLAYS

If the Crimson stops Army on this first invasion under the Harlow regime, an air attack will probably be the answer.

There have been a lot of passes tossed behind the locked gates of the Stadium this week, and the Har-low-ards may be expected to pop other surprises in the order of that accepted, fake-kick flat pass which all but scored against the Purple.

The team entrained at Back Bay station this morning following breakfast at the Varsity Club, and will work out on the Michie turf late this afternoon.

No changes are expected in the tentative lineup announced.

Harvard will start Captain Kelly and Dubiel on the ends, Adlis and Maser at the tackles, Gaffney and Kessler flanking Jones at center, and in the backfield, Hedblom, Adrigan, Ford and Struck.

Mike Adlis, still a mite overweight, has definitely replaced Glendinning at the tackle; the latter is not making the trip.

Sam Greeley, who straddled the pivot burden creditably last week will probably see action. He is considered a little better defensive center than Jones but not the lat ter's equal on offense.

Although Johnny Adrigian will start, Freddy Moseley will be in there alternating with him. Both worked out with team A in the final practice-signal drill, pressure kicking and defense against known Army plays.

FORD'S FOOT

Tommy Bilodeau was in uniform and took his first stiff workout, he makes the trip but Coach Dick Harlow will probably not take any chances with him. He will, how ever, be ready for the Dartmouth game as a needed jump-reviver.

On George Ford's punting, a revelation last week, much of the Crimson's chance depends. Should he get as good protection as last week (and Army will certainly charge no harder than the big Crusaders) the chance is not too slim.

Michigan Squad Arrives for Tilt

By WALTER KILEY

A gambling game, proceeding on the theory that it has everything to gain and nothing to lose, is Head Coach McNamara's plan of campaign against Michigan State Spartans, who were to arrive in Boston at noon today for their Boston College game tomorrow.

Both McNamara and Line Coach Harry Downes have seen tha Charlie Bachman-coached team in Ile last two starts

And to say that both were duly impressed with the speed, power, and deception of his Notre Dame attack is putting it mildly.

Downes sat on while State walloped Univeraity of Michigan, its major rival.

"The finest drilled team I have ever seen," he reports. "Not too big, but fast, perfect in its timing, deceptive in its offense and with a wealth of substitutes as good as, if not better, than its regulars."

KIPKE TRIBUTE

Tins on Downes part is nothing more than reiteration of what Coach Harry Kipke of Michigan had to say about the sailors.

"As fine a team as ever turned out in the Mid-West," Kipke remarked, as the evening shadows fell on his badly beaten warriors, who only two years back were the country's gridiron [illegible].

Yet, withal, McNamara and Downes are quietly confident that they can outdo Michigan.

Defensively, they will put on an unorthodox formation which has been specially designed to [illegible] Green-footed Spartan backs.

Whether or not it will work remains to be seen.

En route to New York after refereeing exhibition bouts in the middleweight, Braddock and his manager, Joe Gould, stopped off in Chicago and inspected the huge lake front stadium where Jack Dempsey made his great stand against Gene Tunney in 1927.

"I hope the fight will be staged in Chicago," Braddock said. "It'll be Joe Louis in June or September, I hope. I fought all the tough punchers in the last 10 years. I like tough punches—I know what they're gonna do."

Royal Lineage was steadied along in back of the pack until reaching the stretch, went to the front when called upon and drew out pretty through the last furlong. Tarbucket, outpaced for most of the way, came with a belated rush through the stretch. Rutland went to the front in the run to the first turn was strung out along under slight restraint, but was unable to keep pace in the closing test. Bedtime showed good speed for the first six furlongs, wrapping Groesbeck Eagle Wark never could reach the leaders. Colorist was never able to reach the leaders. Step in Time was outclassed.

"WHATTAMAN" SHOWS 'EM HOW

Larry Whattaman Kelley, of Yale's football eleven, shows how eggers after that pigskin when he's catching one of the many Yale forward passes. Whattaman sauntered to fame against Penn in Yale's 31-20 victory last Saturday. On one he ran 24 yards after catching a 5 yard pass, and on the other he made a miraculous one-string catch in the end zone. Navy will try to stop "Whattaman" in the Yale bowl tomorrow.

Colorist and Society Editor Other Downs Choices

By Dave Wilson

BEST BET—EVANGELIST

Suffolk Downs, Oct. 18—Evangelist, R. McKeown's fleet sprinter, appears beautifully spotted in the six furlongs of the fourth number here today. Any price looks like a good one.

The afternoon's card is entirely devoted to claiming races.

FIRST RACE

Colorist, Eddie Wrack, Befitting

This is the most wide-open affair on the card. The winner may turn up in the Jersey Stable's COLORIST. This gelding did not do badly in finishing fifth to Anacreon last trip. He figures to improve. EDDIE WRACK holds some class and looks all over the one to fear on best races. BBEFITTING flashed good form in finishing third to Skipsea in a six-furlong dash only a few days back. The increased age will be right down his alley.

SECOND RACE

Society Editor, Galla, Irish Play

SOCIETY EDITOR, third to Fair Deal and La Junta White, appeared to be a dead shot thoroughbred that day. Since then he has worked swiftly and will not have any excuses to offer. GALLA displayed high speed in graduating from the maiden ranks last time out. She is strictly the one to fear. IRISH PLAY is dropping nine pounds off her recent victory. She merits a good chance.

THIRD RACE

Zula Lad, Informal, Fingal

ZULA LAD'S last effort may be tossed into discard. The Randolph colorbearer was caught in close quarters turning out of the backstretch and literally knocked right out of contention. INFORMAL'S recent dull performances was much too poor to be true. Agawam form shows him capable of better things. FINGAL is endowed with a smattering of class and will prove dangerous if up to a go race.

FOURTH RACE:

Evangelist, How High, Soupcon

EVANGELIST stands head and shoulders over this indifferent lot of lowly platers. Don't see how he can miss with an even shake in racing luck. HOW HIGH, the main danger, was once a classy performer. Recent races indicate he is fast rounding to form. SOUPCON isn't much horse, but he must be accorded a good money chance in an affair of this sort.

FIFTH RACE

Gift of Roses, King's Pleasure, Dorothy B.

GIFT OF ROSES was barely headed by Morning Mail last time. She is dropping eight pounds and will be further favored by the outside position. I am "high" on her chances. KING'S PLEASURE, a double winner at the meeting, is in nicely under 112 pounds. He looks all over the one to drub. DOROTHY B.'s recent third to the top one was not all bad considering that she was the chief sufferer in a roughly run race.

SIXTH RACE

Santa Anita, Paul Junior, Stumptown

If SANTA ANITA can't drub this ordinary lot, then she should be turned out. A duplicate of that recent third to Whichaway is all that is needed to insure brackets. PAUL JUNIOR is a maiden, but he should have graduated a long time ago. TUMPTOWN'S recent race have been very poor, but the work tab suggests he can do better.

SEVENTH RACE

Justa Jones, Rhodius, Good Jest

JUSTA JONES' recent fourth to Chimney Top was a corker considering that the one mile and 70 yards were run in the swift time of 1:42 3-5. Rhodius has knocked out a couple of races at the meeting and is strictly the one to drub on all form. GOOD JEST has been sprinting and will be coming up razor sharp.

Presnell Is Lost To Lions

Detroit, Oct. 18—Glenn Presnell, former Nebraska All-America back, and now a member of the Detroit Lions, will be out of the lineup for at least six weeks as the result of a fractured vertebra, according to Dr. William Keane, club physician.

Dr. Snell received the injury last Sunday in the fourth quarter of the game with the Boston Redskins. Dr. Keane said.

The player complained of a sore back in Monday's practice, but it was not until today that the injury was discovered.

The fleet cornhusker has been the Lions' high scoring back this season, tallying 25 points in four games.

Mat Results

At Des Moines, Iowa—Ernie Dusek, 225, Omaha, defeated Baron Gunsberg, 215, New York, best two out of three falls.

At Pittsburgh—Ed Don George, 224, Bayonne, N. J., defeated Joe Savoldi, 240, Three Oaks, Mich., on decision.

Boxing Results

Albany, N. Y.—Nookie Jackson, 163, Westerly, R. I., scored over Jackie Adler, 165, Brooklyn, in a fast 10-round punching duel here. Jackson floored Adler in the first round for nine. Tommy Grady, 140, Chicopee Falls, Mass., outpointed Fast Weaver, 134, Syracuse, in a six-rounder.

Doping Attempt Goes Awry

Laurel, Md., Oct. 18—A bungled attempt was made here to drug two horses in their stalls and the Maryland Racing Commission launched an immediate investigation.

Victims of the clumsy tampering were Deduced and Silent Shot, favorites in the fifth race of the Thursday meeting. Neither appeared to have suffered ill effects. Silent Shot's mouth was blistered and swollen. A sticky white substance was found in Deduce's mouth.

A score of private detectives, aided by Anne Arundel county deputy sheriffs and race track watchmen, joined the investigation. Federal narcotics agents were summoned but withdrawn when it developed the drug was only a sleeping potion.

$152.50 to Place

Lewiston, Me., Oct. 18—Stanwood Guy, owned by Thomas McNamara of Lewiston, paid $152.50 when he finished second in the sixth race in the Thursday meeting here.

It was the largest "place" pay-off since pari-mutuel betting became legal in Maine.

Mr. Boston Annie Isn't Annie More

By JACK CONWAY

WILL somebody hand Annie Oakley the smelling salts? The old girl is holding on to the ropes at the Boston Garden. She has been knocked for a loop by George V. Brown, general manager of the Garden.

A rather ungentlemanly act I would say, but Brown insists he had plenty of reasons for pinning a kayo on Annie's chin.

Mr. Boston

Annie is known under various aliases in different parts of the country. The list includes such names as Chinese ticket, skull, ducat, courtesy pass and complimentary ticket.

Tommy Parle, who is Paul Bowser's head ticket man, won the title as the greatest puncher in the world as a result of his ability to take care of the Annie Oakley customers.

Dave Arata of the Goodwin Club and Tommy Waters of the Garden forces also displayed great punching power, but Parle's title was never in danger. He once fractured his right wrist trying to set up a new record in the Annie Oakley league.

* * *

PAUL BOWSER

Paul Bowser is Parle's boss, but Paul has never been known to say no. This is probably the result of his race track experience. When somebody asks him if he thinks one of his horses has a chance to win, he automatically answers "yes."

They do say, though, that Bowser got a bit miffed one night at the Garden when so many of the Annie Oakley League reported that he couldn't get a seat for himself.

He ended up paying the Garden $1500 rental plus $300 for door men and ushers for the privilege of watching one of his shows while standing up.

There wasn't any money for the wrestlers, and Sam Simons kept them from starting a riot by feeding them a flock of hot weanies. Even a wrestler becomes calm after he eats 18 to 20 of Simons' weanies.

A weanie has a universal appeal. After Jockey George Woolf, up on little Foxy Bow, defeated Discovery, he hurried to one of Sam Simons' stands and attacked a flock of weanies.

Conditions reached a state at the Garden where a cash customer had to know the governor or the mayor to sit in with the Annie Oakley members.

* * *

NEW CONTRACT

BOWSER demanded a new rental arrangement with the Garden. He couldn't stand the strain of paying $1500 a night plus the other overhead for the privilege of watching one of his own shows.

The wrestlers also decided they wanted something besides Sam Simons' weanies for the payoff.

George V. Brown almost fainted when Bowser asked for a reduction in rental. Bowser also suggested a lower percentage arrangement.

"Fifteen or twenty per cent of nothing is still nothing," said Brown.

Bowser agreed that was true.

"You fill the Garden with Chinese customers," insisted Brown. "My ushers are thinking of protesting to the League of Nations. They feel as if they are in a laundry."

Bowser declared he would walk out of the Garden after the Ed Don George-Carl Pojello bout a week from tonight unless he got a new contract.

Brown made a speech about Annie Oakley, and finally agreed to let Bowser have the Garden for a guarantee of $1250 a night plus the cost of ushers, box office men and police and with a 2½ per cent increase in his percentage cut under the condition there would not be more than 500 complimentary tickets to a show.

"What am I going to do about all of the followers of good old Annie Oakley?" demanded Bowser.

"Tell them where the Garden box office is," shot back Brown. "The Garden cost $1,500,000, and we are very sorry we cannot conduct it for your friends and for those who have led the cheering for Annie Oakley."

By Will Connell

Two games bringing defeat to now unbeaten squads highlight tomorrow's sparkling program as the schools continue their thrilling title drive.

Medford, tied scoreless but winner in its other games against good competition, seems likely to trip when it goes to Everett where the home team risks a perfect record.

Lawrence, unbeaten and untied for more than two campaigns, is in for a sad session at eBritram field, Salem, unless the signs mislead. Everett by a touchdown and Salem be perhaps two, is in the stars.

So close will be the conflict in each case that near capacity crowds will get full ticket value at each orchard.

McGUIRK LINE

Malden, which has been good enough to win each time while showing steady improvement, plays host to dangerous Arlington. Stan Madden's passing has Malden somewhat worried,s as well it may.

But the home team, with a rookie line starting the year, now has a typical Warren McGuirk frontier. That means the strongest type in school football, so don't sell Malden short tomorrow.

Waltham takes a perfect record to Haverhill, and while the Watchers are favored, there is a real chance for an upset.

Somerville can win over Chelsea, but the latter is at home and, unless demoralized by the Brockton drubbing, will be tough.

Brockton entertains Newton. The latter, big and strong, could win if it hit its real stride, but Brockton is rolling and should take this one.

Unbeaten Lynn Classical, one of the best teams of the year, will conquer at Beverly, while Marblehead at Gloucester offers one of the closest games of the day. Last year the Headers took a 24 to 20 decision. This year neither has been scoring as well, but there's still much color to each team.

CATHOLIC LOOP

Belmont goes to Concord. If it can beat the home group it will have a chance to finish well up in the Middlesex loop. Melrose has too much for Revere, Woburn is a short-end bet at Peabody, Maynard goes to Winchester with the homers favored.

Unbeaten Malden Catholic faces its strongest foe thus far as it plays St. Mary's at Milford. In the Catholic H. S. League St. Mary's of Brookline faces trouble at St. Charles, Waltham, St. Mary's of Waltham is at St. Clement's in Somerville and Immaculate of Revere goes to Mission, Roxbury.

MADISONS PLAY At Natick, R. I.

The Madison Club of South Boston will jurney to Natick, Rhode Island, to play the Sacred Heart Club at the Natick Athletic field on Sunday. The Madisons will be playing against representatives from Brown, Springfield, Rhode Island State and Providence.

The Madisons lineup will be Captain Egan, center; eMaley and Beggan, guards; Murphy and McCallum, tackles; Myers and Malpiedi, ends. The backfield will have Coveney at quarter; Al Rushman and Billy Conley, halfbacks, and Zoke Fine, fullback.

Tufts Predict Victory Over Middlebury Eleven

Ralph Smith has made good at the left guard berth where he was shifted from his regular tackle position to replace the injured, Captain Jack Randall.

He played against Boston University for more than a full quarter and proved his ability.

The Jumbos go through a light workout this afternoon as a final preparation for the Panthers. The backfield has practically recovered from last week's drubbing, and seems ready for another tough assignment.

The Panthers, while rangy, have had a disappointing season this far, not having won a game in three starts.

As a result the Tufts game gives them almost a final chance to find themselves before they are classed as just another football team.

The Jumbos have worked out defenses against the regular Middlebury plays, and the players themselves feel that the Panthers will have to display some unusual ability to take home the Tufts goalposts.

GAELS BIDDING FOR CROWLEY

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 18—Is it true that "Slip" Magigan is coaching his last year at St. Mary's and that feelers have been sent East to "Sleeps Jim" Crowley of Fordham? . . . Oakland reports say Magigan is having financial and other differences with the school authorities.

So many wolves have been after Doc Spears of Wisconsin he had to go on the air the other night to answer them all.

Lou Wentz, oil baron who almost bought the Cardinals last fall, may get a piece of the Dodgers . . . Al Hessberg, who is red hot for Yale right now, just couldn't get started at Albany Academy where he prepped.

Golfers Live High

It cost golf pros $100 per week to make the swing around the winter circuit . . . That includes traveling expenses and eats . . . When picking your All-America team don't overlook Dick Crayne of Iowa . . . His punting was the deciding factor in the Colgate game.

Don Faurot has all Missouri football conscious again . . . So many are out for his team he has to drill them in day and night shifts . . . Those Gwynn brothers on the Marquette eleven are twins, but were not born on the same day . . . Al checked in a minute or so before midnight and his brother a few minutes after . . . Poor old Walter Halas and his 67 in the first round of the P. G. A.

Jack Dempsey has signed to manage Clarence (Red) Burman, Baltimore battler, for five years . . . Here's amateurism to the nth degree: It costs Yale grid players $10.50 per week to eat at the training table . . . Top price for grub in the regular dining halls is only $8 per week.

His Six Good Bets

We assume Governor Laffoon hasn't neglected to colonel Bert Thompson . . . Jimmy Braddock has cleaned up $100,000 since upsetting Baer.

Things are happening to Don McCallister down at South Carolina . . . When Duke beat the Gamecocks 47-0 it was the biggest score ever piled up against a McCallister team . . . When N. C. State won the next week, it was the first time in nine years one of his teams dropped two in a row.

Six good football bets tomorrow: California over Santa Clara, Penn over Columbia; Texas Centenary; Rice over Southern Methodist; Mississippi over Tulane, and Michigan over Wisconsin.

End Is Lost

Middletown, Conn., Oct. 18 . . . Wesleyan's prospects of winning . . . Haverford here tomorrow received a setback when Jimmy Jones, Wilbraham, Mass., star end for the past two seasons, fractured his collar bone during practice.

GREEN Opposes BROWN

FIRST MEETING IN 5 YEARS

By Bill Grimes

After a five-year break, Dartmouth and Brown resume relations tomorrow at Providence.

The teams are starting the third cycle of their football relations.

During the first series, which started in 1894 and ended abruptly between the 1906 and 1907 seasons, Brown won six and lost five of the 12 games.

When the Indians and the Brunonians declared peace in '17, the Providence outfit was too strong for the Hanoverians for three years. Then Dartmouth came through with five straight victories.

From 1926 through 1929, Dartmouth and Brown won on alternate years and strangely, the home team was the loser on all four occasions.

Years ago, Dartmouth ranked ranked Brown as Enemy No. 1 but the Brunonians have never registered with the younger Big Green alumni. Many of the younger generation may be surprised to learn that in the 24 games played, Dartmouth has won 12 against 11 defeats and one tie.

GREEN FAVORED

Although represented by some great clubs in the past, Brown had some unusually formidable elevens during the recent break with Dartmouth.

The Big Green might have seen the hand writing on the wall, for, from 1930 through 1932, the Brunonians lost only seven games, despite the fact that they played some of the [illegible] teams in the land.

[illegible] Dartmouth broad will enter the game favored [illegible] high scoring [illegible] with a total of 120 points [illegible] Brown, on the other hand, [illegible] and has only [illegible] to its credit. [illegible] will want to be [illegible] Brunonians [illegible] the game [illegible] spirit of the Green will make a [illegible] if they enter tomorrow's game with a superiority complex.

Brown will be stronger than it was in its two previous encounters. The Brunonians are light and of limited numbers but, like all of their predecessors, they will display an abundance of fight.

Furthermore, in Tuss McLaughry, they have a coach who knows football from all angles.

FEATHER CHAMPION RIGHT IN THE 'PINK'

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

It didn't take Freddie Miller, world featherweight boxing champion, long to find New England's best and most complete evening sports section once he arrived in town. He is now a firm booster of the Boston Evening American "Pink" because of its complete summary of sports events every evening. Freddie will defend his title at the Garden next Tuesday night against Vernon Cormier.

Miller Vs. Cormier

TOP NOTCHERS MEET TUESDAY AT GARDEN

By Jack Conway

Freddy Miller and Vernon Cormier will have the blessing of the National Boxing Association when they clash in their 15-round world's featherweight championship bout at the Garden on next Tuesday night.

Jack Ahearn of St. Paul, Minn., who was recently elected president of the National Boxing Association, has notified Matchmaker Ray Cass of the Garden that his organization has sanctioned the title contest.

"I consider Freddy Miller a great champion," writes Ahearn. "He has kept active in the ring, and has defended his title against all-comers.

"I consider his feat of defeating 32 challengers in Europe one the greatest in the history of boxing."

Miller is training at Jerry Buckley's Gym on Friend street. The champion showed amazing boxing form and hitting power in his first workout here.

Miller is a southpaw. He jabs and hooks and uses his right hand [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MAT TITLE BOUT

Robbins Vs. Mephisto

Winn Robbins, light heavyweight mat titlist, will defend his belt in a bout with Mephisto, German gladiator, at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night.

The German grappler earned the title contest by defeating Ted Germaine.

Robbins, who is clever as well as rough, watched Mephisto pin Germaine. After the tussle he predicted he would have little trouble with the German.

CONNIE MACK IN N. Y. TO FILL COFFER

REPORT Entire Team FOR SALE

SOX BID FOR FOXX, CRAMER

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, Oct 18 (AP)—You can pretty well write it down now—almost anything is likely to happen when Connie Mack lifts the lid on the baseball pot that has been boiling for weeks with rumored deals involving his Athletics' stars.

The talk, that has included almost every outstanding player on the club as up for sale or trade to about half the teams in the American League, reached a new high overnight with receipt of word that the A's lean leader is in New York, possibly considering another of his history-making deals.

Leading the possibilities were these:

That Jimmy Foxx, first baseman and top-flight slugger, would go to either the Chicago White Sox, Boston Red Sox or the Cleveland Indians.

That Pinky Higgins, one of the classiest third basemen in the league, is slated for the New York Yankees.

That Roger (Flit) Cramer, outfielder extraordinary, will be with the White Sox or Red Sox when 1936 rolls around.

That Bob Johnson and the rookie outfield find, Wally Moses, are also under consideration for transfer to some other club.

That Jimmy Dykes, the White Sox manager, is admittedly after Foxx and Cramer.

Reported Fishing

That anyone or all of these deals may be consummated; that none go through, particularly because of the price tags Mack is said to be putting on the players, or that the deals may be shuffled around so that one or the other of the sale prospects will be with some club not mentioned as his destination.

Much importance was attached to Connie's trip to New York. He's been there for three days, although his office says he's fishing—but Connie doesn't fish.

Some of the talk was that he may be meeting officials of either the Yanks or the Red Sox. The understanding is that the Yanks need seasoned infielders, and are interested in either Higgins, McNair or both.

It is said Joe McCarthy is thinking of keeping only Red Rolfe and Lou Gehrig of his 1933 inner garden, and for that reason has his eye on the two A's performers, especially because of the report that he was after Higgins a year ago, but decided the price at that time was prohibitive.

Sox Seek Cramer

The Red Sox, so the story goes, are particularly interested in Cramer. The word is that Owner Tom Yawkey feels the addition of the New Jersey ball-player will make his infield.

Dykes arrived at his Philadelphia home last night for his winter stay, and made no bones about the fact that he'd "certainly like to have Foxx and Cramer because then our troubles will be over."

Underlying all this—and seemingly lending credence to some of the reports—is Connie's recent deals, by which he has acquired a first-base star and a good outfielder from the coast, and another promising outer-gardener, George Puccinello, from Baltimore.

PITTSBURGH OVER NOTRE DAME

Irish Are Untested

By Associated Press

New York, Oct. 18—Consoled by the reflection that the program can't get much tougher, this football guesser emerges from the weekly huddle with the following unguaranteed observations:

NOTRE DAME—PITT—This is a good Notre Dame team beyond a doubt, perhaps one that will go on to emulate the deeds of the Rockne era. Pitt, on the other hand, has lost most of last season's great eleven and the replacements have not been tried under real fire. This bunch ballot for Pittsburgh is based mostly on the belief that the Panthers will shackle the Rambler offense just about as effectively as they have the last three years.

YALE-NAVY—This looks like a high-scoring affair in which the breaks will prove the deciding factor. Despite Yale's sensational comeback against Penn, the choice here is Navy.

ARMY PICKED

ARMY-HARVARD—Dick Harlow probably will have a dangerous outfit at Cambridge by mid-November. This being October, Army gets the nod.

MINNESOTA-TULANE—Minnesota seems to pack too much sheer power for Tulane, but it may be close.

NORTH CAROLINA STATE—GEORGIA—A battle of unbeaten teams, the Southern against the Southeastern Conference, Georgia, mainly because the Bulldogs seem to have the greater punch.

CALIFORNIA-SANTA CLARA—One upset a week is the quota on the Pacific Coast and this may be it, California, nevertheless.

SOUTHERN METHODIST-RICE —No tougher one to pick. Stringing along with the defending champions, Rice.

FORDHAM - VANDERBILT — Fordham looked extremely bad against Purdue last week and will need to show sharp improvement to get anywhere against Ray Morrison's Commodores, Vanderbilt.

PENN-COLUMBIA—Has Harvey Harman been able to convince his Penn warriors that a football game consists of four periods, not two? Even if he has, can the Quakers solve Columbia's bag of tricks? Out of sheer stubbornness, perhaps, Penn.

BOSTON COLLEGE-MICHIGAN STATE—State's fleet backs should make this one easy.

BROWN-DARTMOUTH — Dartmouth, unless the age of miracles is not passed.

CARNEGIE TECH-TEMPLE — Temple.

CROSS TO WIN

MANHATTAN-HOLY CROSS—Holy Cross, but the Crusaders had better show more punch at the goal line than they did against Harvard.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY-PENN MILITARY—P. M. C.'S all-senior array may give N. Y. U. some embarrassing moments, but the undefeated Violets are the indicated choice.

PRINCETON-RUTGERS —Princeton.

SYRACUSE-OHIO WESLEYAN —Syracuse.

LAFAYETTE-COLGATE — Unless the Red Raiders forget their luncheon baskets, it should be a picnic for Colgate.

WISCONSIN-MICHIGAN: Michigan, but we'd settle for a scoreless tie.

OHIO STATE-NORTHWESTERN: Northwestern hasn't shown enough yet to indicate the Wildcats can stop the Ohio State juggernaut.

CHICAGO-PURDUE: Purdue.

DETROIT-CATHOLIC: Detroit but it'll be a battle.

KANSAS STATE-NEBRASKA: Nebraska to stop the Big Six champions.

INDIANA-CINCINNATI: Indiana sputtered and stalled against Michigan last week. A flier on Cincinnati.

Tennessee-Alabama: Alabama apparently plays all its football on alternate Saturdays, this being the week for a Crimson Tide comeback.

Admit Putting Real Weakness

New York, Oct. 18 (AP)—The British Ryder Cup golf team and the Wightman Cup tennis team were on their way back to England today with some new opinions of American competitors.

Alfred Perry, British and Scottish open golf champion, took on the cock of the Aquitania before sailing time last night and said that Yankee adeptness at putting caused the downfall of him and his mates. "Americans pick up five or six shots in every round on the greens," he said. "I think we can outshoot Americans up to the greens, and if we had their skill at putting, why we'd win every time."

GOBS Entered In AMATEURS

The fourth and final tryout for the Golden Gloves final, under the auspices of the Irish-American A. A., is on the card for the fight fans of New England at the Boston Arena tonight.

Every class on the program from bantamweight to lightweight is filled with ambitious youngsters who are ready to give their all to make a place on the finals tournament, which will be held at the Arena on October 28.

The U. S. Navy will be represented by two exceptionally fine battlers—Tommy Knights of the U.S.S. Iwana in the 126-lb. class, and Teddy Kendricks of the U. S. S. Arkansas in the lightheavyweight division. Both boys have a large following of the personnel of each of their ships.

The winners of tonight's tournament will automatically place their names on the list in their respective classes for the Golden Gloves finals.

Navy Squad Arrive Ahead of Schedule

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 18 (AP)—A highly touted Navy eleven, rated by some experts the best football team the Annapolis institution ever has produced, arrived in New Haven today twenty-four hours in advance of their game with Yale, one of the major attractions on the eastern grid front tomorrow. The party consisted of 60 members.

After a light workout the Middies will go to Cheshire and spend the night in quarters at the Roxbury school.

A light workout was scheduled for the Elis whose starting lineup was announced by Head Coach Raymond Pond yesterday.

With Captain Kim Whitehead and Jerry Roscoe in the backfield will be two sophomores, Clint Frank and Al Hessberg. Charlie Ewart, another sophomore, is certain to see plenty of backfield duty.

Larry Kelley and Bob Train, ends; Tom Wilson and Jack Wright, tackles; Webb Davis and Jack Snavely, guards, and Dick Herold, center, will comprise the line.

Navy Rooters Invade New Haven

New Haven, Ct., Oct. 18 (AP)—This city will be navy conscious tomorrow sure enough with the arrival of 1034 rooters from the naval academy at Annapolis — three trainloads of them—to buck up their gridiron warriors in the struggle against Yale.

The trains will all be on their sidings at the New Haven railroad station by 3:25 a. m. and at 7:30 o'clock it will be the task of the railroad to feed the arrivals.

Officials announced today that the entire station would be a great breakfast room for their guests with tables the entire length of two balconies.

HIRSCH May Start SPLIT SECOND

By Associated Press

Max Hirsch is considering sending his two-year-old filly, Split Second, to the post in the Selima Stakes at Laurel Saturday. Split Second has a good turn of speed, and the one-mile gallop should be to her liking.

Word has been received that the purses at the Fair Grounds in New Orleans will be $500 with a handicap twice a week. Ten stakes will be run. Several horsemen campaigning at Empire have signified their intention of racing at New Orleans this winter.

New Carnegie Ukase

Again at Nefarious Practices

THE Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, founded in 1910, by a Scotchman who posed as an American, is again at its nefarious practices.

One of the prime activities of this home for dangerous busybodies is to pitch America into the European hell-broth, which is ALWAYS simmering.

The new drive to drag us into the League of Nations, its decoy, the World Court, and to get us to cancel the war debts so that our pockets can be picked again now emanates from London.

C. Douglas Booth, coming by way of Canada, is now the international propagandist for the Carnegie setup.

Before the Rotary Club of Cicero, Illinois, he blandly unfolded the following plan, hatched in London, for the United States:

1—Adherence to the League of Nations and the World Court.

2—Cancellation of all war debts.

3—Scrapping of American tariff schedules and the opening of our ports to European goods.

4—All American social and labor problems to be settled by the Labor Bureau of the League at Geneva.

5—America must disarm.

THERE seems to be one thing that Mr. Booth and the Carnegie foundation for the undoing of America forgot—that all elections for President and Congressmen shall take place in Europe.

Communism and such organizations as the American Civil Liberties Union are not the only forces that aim at the overthrow of our institutions.

Anti-American propaganda works under the mask of RESPECTABILITY and PHILANTHROPIC HUMANITARIANISM in the shape of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace

The Carnegie endowment should be DISSOLVED and its funds segregated and used for PATRIOTIC PURPOSES.

Since Court Shot the Eagle

Business Improves

An upward trend in business has been noticed ever since mid-summer, store executives say.

Not long before mid-summer—in May—the United States Supreme Court held the NRA unconstitutional.

The Administration promptly declared that this decision would prove a terrible blow to recovery, and (by inference) that the disasters which would result could be laid to the "nine old men" who had presumed to throw a monkey-wrench into the NRA machinery.

But since no disaster occurred, and since business generally has shown more confidence after the decision, the Administration now says nothing about its dire forebodings, but, on the contrary, claims credit for whatever improvement has been registered.

Sensible Americans, looking at the facts, will be able to decide whether this claim is justified or is about the most brazen case of "political larceny" on record.

Shooting the Wild Deer

And Others

The Maine deer hunting season started this week.

In six northern counties between 100,000 and 125,000 deer, according to Associated Press estimates, are now legally "targets."

Many deer will be killed, along, of course, with an unknown quota of human beings, shot by accident or "mistake."

A word of warning to hunters is both timely and needed.

Practically every one of the hunting casualties to human beings is AVOIDABLE.

It is the plain duty of those using dangerous weapons to have due regard for human lives—their own and others.

Children Have Rights

Woe to Land That Denies Them

Some adults may think otherwise, but children DO have rights.

A list of them as drawn up for the State Congress of Parents and Teachers at Buffalo includes:

The right to health.

The right to a happy home.

The right to adequate, proper schooling.

The right to be recognized as the greatest responsibility of any community.

The right to a childhood properly divided among study, work and play.

Give those RIGHTS to children and have no fear for the men and women of tomorrow.

How Old Is a Bride?

Washington Tells Us

How old is a bride?

Doesn't sound like ANYONE could answer that question.

But the Census Bureau statisticians in Washington THINK they can.

So they tell us Massachusetts brides average the oldest in the United States.

And go on to declare the average Bay State bride weds when she is twenty-four and one-tenth years old.

But what we'd like to know is just how the Census people learned so much about the fair ones' ages.

Anyway, you don't HAVE to believe everything you hear!

New England Council

Tenth Anniversary

The tenth annual "town meeting" of New England business is announced by Dudley Harmon, executive vice-president of the New England Council, to take place in Boston, Nov. 21-22.

The idea that a handful of men took to the first conference in Worcester in 1925 has shown remarkable vitality.

The tenth conference will be marked by an exhibition of the new products of a score of our industries.

Governors and business leaders of ALL the New England states will be on hand to co-operate in mapping out the route for further travel on the road back to prosperity.

All this should result in progress.

Paving the Way!

By Nelson Harding

The road is being fully paved,
A speedway in the making.
There is no pinching of the cost
In this great undertaking.

The road goes on and on and on,
No stinting of the dough there.
And all that jack is being used
To pave a road to NOWHERE.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Oct. 18—Thoughts while strolling: Top in tapsEleanor Powell. Lindbergh overdue in the air is not news anymore. That bird always shows up. Will Irwin's curly locks. Best named Negro fiction character: Octavus Roy Cohen's Florian Slappey, the Birmingham dude.

Stick-along-the-picket-fence honey: Kennecott Copper. Who can forget the way Sothern and Marlowe romped through The Taming of the Shrew? Never saw a dull Skippy strip. Ditto: Believe It or Not. Nobody can stick up their hair like Georges Metaxa. Not since Valentino, anyway.

Goofy play title: "A Slight Case of Murder." Wonder if Talbot Mundy knows Rascot Lundy? Paul Gallico thinks Joe Louis can lick Arthur Brisbane's gorilla. Dandy smoke ring word: Coronado. A wince to see that sterling actor, William Faversham, going bits in the movies.

Those romantic ice time nymphs who go to hear Eddie Duchin improvise—and dream. Grace George could pass for 35. Suggestion for a magazine piece: Broadway by Max Baer. That dapper Chinese communist who passes out free tracts after the theater—bowing and scraping.

Zoe Akins's name: a dentist's drill touching an exposed nerve. The bald heads have to go some to beat the shine on Postmaster Farley's dome. Coffee and sandwich place called "The Royal Dunkery." I like Baird Leonard's favorite time for work—"The last possible moment."

Incidentally, Miss Leonard has recorded some writing quirks of interest to the craft. Lord Tweedsmuir wrote best abed sipping gin and water. Voice: "Who couldn't?"

Chirvie and Marcel Proust needed noise-proof isolation, while Conan Doyle wanted a den or more around him and often joined in their conversation. Theophile Gautier and Marie Corelli were locked in their rooms until they had written certain amounts.

And Jerome K. Jerome composed while walking the streets at night.

Many readable books are defeated by their titles. The grandest of mystery writers, Oppenheim, is so often unfortunate in his selections. The obvious usually plunks the bull's-eye. Publishers say few titles touch Sinclair Lewis's "Main Street."

Today came a bummer of a title in Edison Marshall's inscribed copy of "Sam Campbell, Gentleman." Margaret Fishback for a published group of her poems a few years ago called it "Out of My Head." That's the informality publishers crave.

Informality also frequently produces the finest literature, the best writing size-ups and cruelest. Lord Northcliffe wrote some of his most telling articles during the war, motoring home at night on the compliments of trains.

Rob Davis, in his magazine days, used to take long street car rides to read manuscripts. The jolting and confusion somehow strengthened his powers of concentration. On a summer car to Rockaway one day he "discovered" Fannie Hurst.

W. R. Hearst writes editorial criticisms and suggestions in long hand across the face of his papers and magazines for various editors.

Restaurants report that roasted baby turkey is the season's favorite dish with New York gourmets. Another offering in high favor is Potatoes Auvergne, which is a baked potato halved, stuffed with mashed potato flecked with green and red peppers, a suspicion of garlic and centered with a chunk of butter.

Salt rising bread is also on some menus in swank places. Also fresh buttermilk and wet hash. The Depot Short Order motif!

For name pronouncers: Hoyningen-Huene. He is the fashion photographer whose spreads in the magazines are among the Ambitious Yens of society folk. Indeed, so great is the demand he takes a three months sabbatical every summer, which he spends at a surprising villa in North Africa, just outside Morocco.

The temperamental, highly artistic photographer is a development during the past 10 years. They started in the same roll with contemporary painters and musicians. And their incomes are often in five figures. Cecil Beaton's, for instance.

Charlie Hughes passes along the one about the Detroit traffic cop bawling out an unassuming lady motorist. Said he:

"Don't you know what I mean when I hold up my hand?"

She, meekly: "I ought to. I have been a school teacher for 25 years."

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

A WIFE WANTED! BUT—

Should a wife be a person or a stage prop?

Should she have a private program of her own—interests apart from her husband and children? Pleasures he's husband does not share—of which he may not even approve? Or should the freedom and privileges of her maiden days cease the instant she answers—"I DO"?

According to Mr. Nino Martini, she most decidedly SHOULDN'T and they most decidedly SHOULD.

EXPLICIT ON ROMANCE

That Nino has certainly started something! Idol of the opera—vividly young and handsome—wealthy, famous, charming—A Fairy Prince in person and looking for his Fairy Princess.

Moreover, he advertises the fact—in an interview with Rose Heylbut in the October issue of "GOOD HOUSEKEEPING"—as astonishing as his spectacular self.

"I WANT TO FALL IN LOVE," says Senor Martini in the largest letters at his command. But not with Just Anyone! Oh —my dearie—NO! Never has a gentleman been more explicit in his romantic requirements—and what wouldn't I give to be a fly on the wall when the girls read it.

For, despite flowery phrases, Nino Martini makes it plain that he does NOT regard our famous Clarified Gals as a domestic treat. Yes, they're pretty to look at—fun to play with. But as wives they're a pain-in-the-neck and nothing else but!

Elsie Robinson

"BE YOURSELF"

Why this uncomplimentary conclusion? Because, says he, the American girl regards marriage too flippantly. It is merely a detail in her personal career. She has been taught, and firmly believes, that the development of her own individuality is her FIRST DUTY and takes precedence over w.fehood and motherhood.

The woman who loses herself in her husband and home is looked at with contempt.

"BE YOURSELF!" is the slogan of modern womanhood. And if a peevish, possessive husband gets in your way that's HIS bad luck!

But this, according to the Nino notion, is the exact reverse of the Proper Order of things.

The wife, says he, exists for the home, and they both exist for the joy, convenience and domestic pride of the husband—who, at all times, has a right to be as jealous and possessive as he pleases.

Which statement will be greeted with contemptuous snorts and derisive hoots from several million maidens. Yet I wonder if the idea hasn't points. They've been promised such large pride and pleasure, these modern, emancipated girls, with all their new privileges.

IS BRIDE HAPPIER?

They've been told how much better life will be for them than it was for their "shackled" mothers—how much sweeter their husbands. But have the promises come true?

Is the modern bride really so much happier than her mother was? Is her life really richer—her companionship with her husband really deeper and more lasting? I wonder!

Yet, on the other hand, just how would an 1836 wife fit into a 1936 scene? That's the peril of wife Nino Martini wants. And many a young American male will agree with him—in theory.

But would that young American enjoy A Clinging Vine in practice? How useful would she be to him in his hurried, worried days? How efficient a mother to up-and-coming American children?

What's YOUR vote? If you were choosing a wife—or a husband—would you follow the Martini specifications? Or vote for a modern model? Send in your answer, and I'll forward it to Nino. He asked for it!

Words of Wise

Our destiny as a people lies in the hands of our teachers, newspapers and church.—Dr. Robert A. Millikan.

Do not be anxious about your rights, but only about your duties.—Alexander Hamilton.

Every man has a right to think as he pleases for at times it cannot be discovered how he thinks. —Samuel J. Tilden.

Early and provident fear is the mother of safety.—Edmund Burke.

Excellence is not granted to any man but as a reward of labor.—Joshua Reynolds.

A decent provision for the poor and homeless is the true test of civilization.—Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Menelaus lost his temper when Paris eloped with Helen; when he went after her he lost a lot of time and sleep, and when he got her back, he probably lost his interest. Which is the history of most love-triangles.

The man who lies to a woman is an angel of mercy compared to the one who insists on telling her the honest truth about herself when she has just come back from the beauty parlor.

The only "impossible" man is the one who has never found it impossible to love any woman as he loves himself.

An alleged cynic refers to women as "the dissatisfied sex." But that is nonsense! All any woman wants is love, jewels, new clothes, flowers, dates, compliments, theatres—and a little extra spending money.

In love there are no such words as "if," "but," or "perhaps." There are only two words—"yes" and "no."

Some Silhouettes

Human Side of the News

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

A silhouette or two against the background of the news:

Matthew Woll, round-headed and squat, with his inseparable winged collar and bow tie, asks American labor to come to the assistance of the 10,000 labor union refugees from Nazism and Fascism in Central Europe.

This vice-president and money man of the American Federation has been in America 44 of his 55 years and there are few in the country today more staunch in defense of its institutions or more hostile to Communism than this same lawyer-photo-engraver!

He was born in Luxemburg and has been active in labor circles since 1890. He was one of Sam Gompers' right-hand men.

ANATHEMA TO REDS

He is anathema to the Reds, ferreting them out of the councils of labor and repeating time and again that the purpose of Moscow and its followers in this country is to overthrow the American form of government and substitute a Red dictatorship.

Malin D. Craig, broad, gray, 60, and a major-general, became chief of staff of the United States Army at a time when military preparation is a most important question.

The English like to say that the Battle of Waterloo was won on the playing fields of Eton.

Classmates of Gen. Craig like to trace back his appointment as boss of the army to the football fields of West Point.

When young Craig, a native of Missouri, got into the academy he found himself not quite ready for the stiff and specialized course.

This was natural, because he had missed not a little schooling traveling about the country with his family, his father being an army officer.

KICKS FIELD GOAL

He may have been weak on trigonometry but he was long on quick-thinking in an emergency.

They found this out at the Point during a football game in which Craig was playing against Trinity College. He was carrying the ball when he found himself about to be hemmed in by his opponents.

Thereupon he stopped and calmly booted the ball between the uprights for a field goal. It was a perfectly legal play but no one had ever thought of it before, let alone accomplished it.

At Oxford, Frederick Leith-Ross was a master of the Intricacies of Latin verse but he was lost to literature when Herbert Asquith took him as secretary. Today Sir Frederick is the Anthony Eden of the economic side of the British government.

He is only forty-three but he has the imposing title of "Chief Economic Adviser to the Treasury.

He is the man behind the success of the managed currency plan which has brought England out of the woods of depression.

For all of that, he does not seem to be liked, particularly by the Japanese military party which is watching him very closely and with open suspicion in China, where he is at present.

England sent him there last month, supposedly on a fact-finding mission but the Japanese, among others, seem satisfied that his main object is to build up British trade and prestige and to get China to tie up her currency with the pound sterling.

Sir Frederick first went to Tokio to assure the Japanese that if a question of policy was decided upon, he would not act.

Major General Isogaya, Japan's military attache to China, says bluntly:

"If Sir Frederick Leith-Ross' mission is for the good of China and Oriental peace, Japan will welcome his activities, but if it is not, Japan shall see that he does not get very far."

Jersey Justice an Example

By JAMES T. WILLIAMS, JR.

"IT is always the right, and often the duty, of a trial judge to comment on the evidence, said give the jury his impression of its weight and value."

This emphatic endorsement of trial by jury at common law is given by the New Jersey Court of Errors and Appeals in its unanimous decision, upholding the conviction and sentence to death of the kidnaper of the Lindbergh baby.

When every state in the Union provides for the same system of trial by jury at common law that obtains in New Jersey there will be more justice and less crime throughout the Union.

The only reason why trial by jury at common law is not now provided for in every state in the Union was revealed by the only American who had been both President and Chief Justice of the United States.

Replying to the request of a newspaper to recommend reforms most needed in our criminal laws, Chief Justice Taft shortly before his death cited three. The one on which he placed the greatest emphasis was the extension of the system of criminal prosecution which has long existed in New Jersey.

"Trial by jury at common law, as defined by the Supreme Court of the United States," wrote Chief Justice Taft, "was a trial by a jury of 12 men in the presence and under the super-independence of a judge empowered to instruct them on the law and to advise them on the facts, and, except on acquittal of a criminal charge, to set aside their verdict, if, in his opinion, it is against the law or the evidence.

"This is the trial by jury that is now conducted in the English courts. It is the trial by jury that is now conducted in the federal courts of the United States.

"I emphasizes the necessity for superintendence and guidance by the judge not only in the conduct of the trial and the assistance to be rendered by him to the jury, but also in advice upon the facts.

"It leaves to the jury full discretion, after such instruction and advice, to decide what the facts are, without being controlled by the judge.

"It is this power exercised by the judge which makes the criminal trials in the English courts so speedy and so satisfactory. The judge in the first place determines what facts can be admitted in evidence, and what, if tendered, should be rejected.

"After each lawyer in his argument has made the case as favorable to his side as he can, the judge 'sums up' the evidence, as it is called. He dissects it, explains the relevance of each important part of it to the issue to be decided, and makes clear to the comprehension of the jury, not so much the weight of the evidence as the bearing of it upon the actual issue."

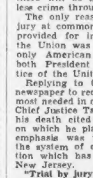
Many state legislatures have so restricted the judge by legislative provision that he is prevented from clarifying the case for the jury. This opens the way for lawyers to confuse the issues, befuddle the jury and mislead the jurors into an unjust verdict.

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Speaking of Men—

No man can see why he should resist a temptation when he knows that, like taxicabs, there will always be another one along in a few minutes.



Helen Rowland

It's love at high tide when you can look into each other's eyes and feel that nothing which has happened before seems worth while, and that nothing that follows will matter much.

The first sign that a man is growing middle-aged is when he finds himself sighing with relief instead of with regret, when a girl breaks a date and gives him a chance to catch up on his reading and his beauty sleep.

Why do people look so surprised, when a rich man in his fifties marries a girl half his age? Isn't he getting just about the best little wife that money can buy?

Isn't It So?

There are people who appear to be incapable of doing anything without quarreling.

Worry is an alloy which always debases the fine metal of good character.

No man has earned the right to rule who has not learned to obey.

Tears soon dry.
